Race Inferno Claims 2 Lives In Second Lap

500-Miler Restarted First Time

COMBINED AP & UPI

INDIANAPOLIS—Eddie Sachs, auto racing's most talkative driver, and Dave MacDonald, a promising rookie up from the sports car ranks, were killed today in a flaming seven-car pile-up at the start of the Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Also rushed by ambulance to the field hospital were Bobby Unser, Albuqerque, N.M.; Norm Hall of Hollywood, Calif.; Johnny Rutherford, Fort Worth, Texas, and Ronnie Duman, Dearborn, Mich.

He was taken to the field hospital after guards and crewmen beat out the burning uniform.

Announcement of the death of Sachs to the crowd of 325,000 watching the speed classic was delayed.

But his wife and MacDonald's broke down in tears and near hysterics in the track hospital.

"Let me see him, let me see him," Mrs. Sherry MacDonald pleaded when she was taken into the hospital tent, but she was denied this wish. She was taken into a side room where she broke down.

Mrs. Sachs shortly thereafter was taken to the same room, where she also broke down.

Sachs was the first killed in the race since 1958 when Pat O'Connor died in the worst accident in speedway history, a 16-car pileup on the northeast turn.

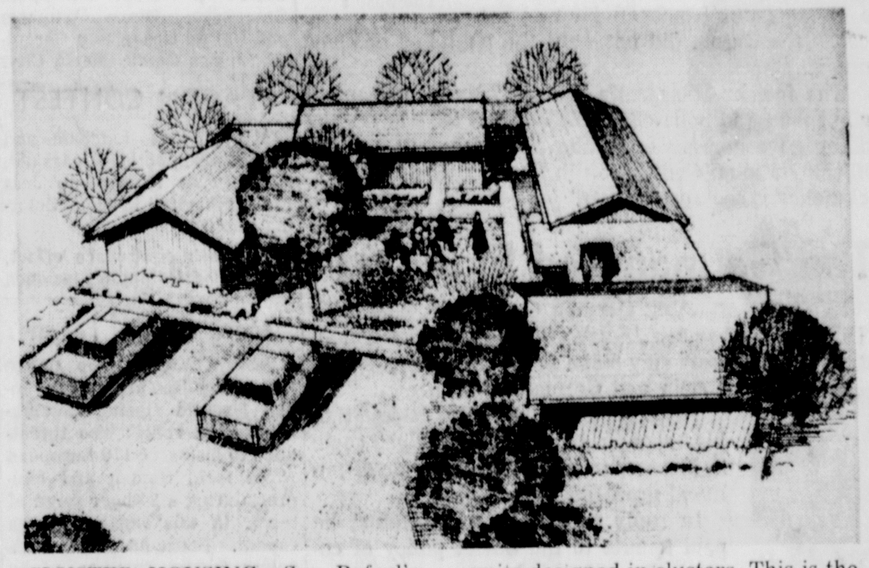
The cars were lined up for a restart, in the same order the survivors were running on the second lap, with Jim Clark in front and Bobby Marshman second.

For the restart, 29 of the original 33 cars were lined up. Missing were those of Sachs, Unser, Duman and MacDonald.

Two cars designed by Joseph Huffaker, 35, of 14 Fleetwood Court, Novato, were still in the running after 150 miles.

They were the MG Huffaker-Offenhauser, driven by Walter Hansgen, Bedminster, N.J., and the MG Offenhauser driven by Bob Veith of Fort Bragg, running sixth and seventh.

Both rear-engined, the cars were entered by British Motor Car Distributors of San Francisco. Huffaker, a Marin resident for more than 20 years, is head of the competition department for BMC.



CLUSTER HOUSING—San Rafael's proposed housing for elderly would be a ground-level development of units designed in clusters. This is the way architect Gordon A. Phillips, who volunteered his time for the study, envisions the project.

San Rafael Council To See Proposal On Low-Cost Apartments For Elderly

A City of San Rafael project to provide housing for elderly citizens in ground-floor apartments within walking distance of shops at only $60 per month will be proposed to the city council Monday night.

The proposal is the outgrowth of work of the mayor's committee on housing for the elderly, appointed last November by Mayor John F. McInnis.

The project would be self-liquidating and would serve as a pilot project which might be expanded to many such neighborhood developments if it proves acceptable to the people it is designed to serve, according to City Councilman Charles W. Aby, chairman of the committee.

It would not be public housing, in the usual sense. The apartments would be rented in the ordinary manner, with the city as landlord. The city, however, would restrict occupancy to persons within certain age and income brackets and with a specified minimum of San Rafael residence.

Aby said the restrictions would be worked out by the council, but the committee would recommend minimum age of 65 and maximum income of $3,000 per year to qualify for the apartments.

The pilot project would be built on a 13,000-square foot city-owned lot at Fourth and Union streets, only a short walk from the Montecito Shopping Center and not far from downtown stores.

Design and specifications of the buildings, which would appear as "cluster housing" rather than apartments, have been completed by architect Gordon A. Phillips, working as an unpaid volunteer with the committee. Cost breakdowns have been prepared by builder John J. Farrar Jr., a member of the committee.

Aim of the project, according to Farrar, is to fill the need of "our senior group who are voluntarily or involuntarily retired and whose income remains static while costs continue to climb."

The apartment units would be from 550 to 600 square feet each, with one bath, one bedroom, living room, dining room and combination kitchen and storage. They would be built on slabs, to eliminate steps. Electrical baseboard heat would be installed and they would be insulated and sound-proofed. Materials providing minimum of maintenance and maximum of beauty" would be used.

Farrar's figures show 10 such units could be built on the Fourth and Union streets property for $65,000. These could be amortized at rent of $60 per month, including electricity, water and garbage service.

The plan calls for the city to put up the homes and repay the cost into the city treasury out of the revenues. Expenses are estimated at $460 per month for the 10 units, leaving $140 per month to be applied against cost. There would be no land cost since the city owns the land.

Serving on the committee with Aby and Farrar has been Omar E. McNally, retired Machinists Union business agent and former Marin County Housing Authority chairman. Serving as consultants were Richard Phenix, county coordinator of senior citizen services; Edward Halperin, real estate salesman, and Donald R. Stutsman, executive director of the Marin County Housing Authority and Redevelopment Agency.

Burglar Raids Reno Death Figure's Home

The burglary was discovered yesterday at the home of Dr. Sherman O. Wirt, 58, of 104 Walnut Avenue, but the loss has not been determined, reported Corte Madera Police Chief Frank Nelson.

He said the burglary appeared to be the work of professionals who removed a window from the attached garage and then gained entry from the garage into the house.

The interior was ransacked and a gold ring was found on a rug, the chief said. Corte Madera police have been checking the unoccupied house since Wirt's absence, he said.

Dr. Wirt, and his companion, Helen Carlson Calani, 44, will appear in Virginia City Justice Court Thursday for a preliminary hearing on the murder charge.

They have been charged with the fatal shooting last Saturday of Richard Ghilotti, 59, at his Virginia City home. Justice of the Peace Edward Colletti of Storey County ordered the pair held without bail Thursday.

CALIFORNIA LEADS IN GRIM AUTO TOLL

COMBINED AP & UPI

Thirteen persons died in California traffic last night and today, putting California in a grim lead over all other states in the Nation as the Memorial Day holiday got underway.

Five were victims of accidents in the Los Angeles area. The other fatalities occurred in the northern part of the state.

The California Highway Patrol and local law enforcement agencies assigned all available personnel to traffic patrols in an effort to stem the toll.

Only Texas — with 12 fatalities — was close to California in the nation's toll of traffic deaths early Memorial Day.

National death toll as of 11:30 a.m. today showed 156 traffic deaths, 13 drownings, and 31 due to miscellaneous accidents, giving a total of 200.

Anshen Will Names Blonde Seen At Fire

Architect S. Robert Anshen, whose death in his San Francisco office following a mysterious fire in his Marin home Sunday is still under investigation, willed most of his estate to his woman companion.

Identity of the woman, Sarah Rafetto, was revealed for the first time yesterday when a petition was filed in Marin County Superior Court for probation of his will.

Meanwhile, San Francisco Coroner Henry Turkel today ruled the death "accidental,"

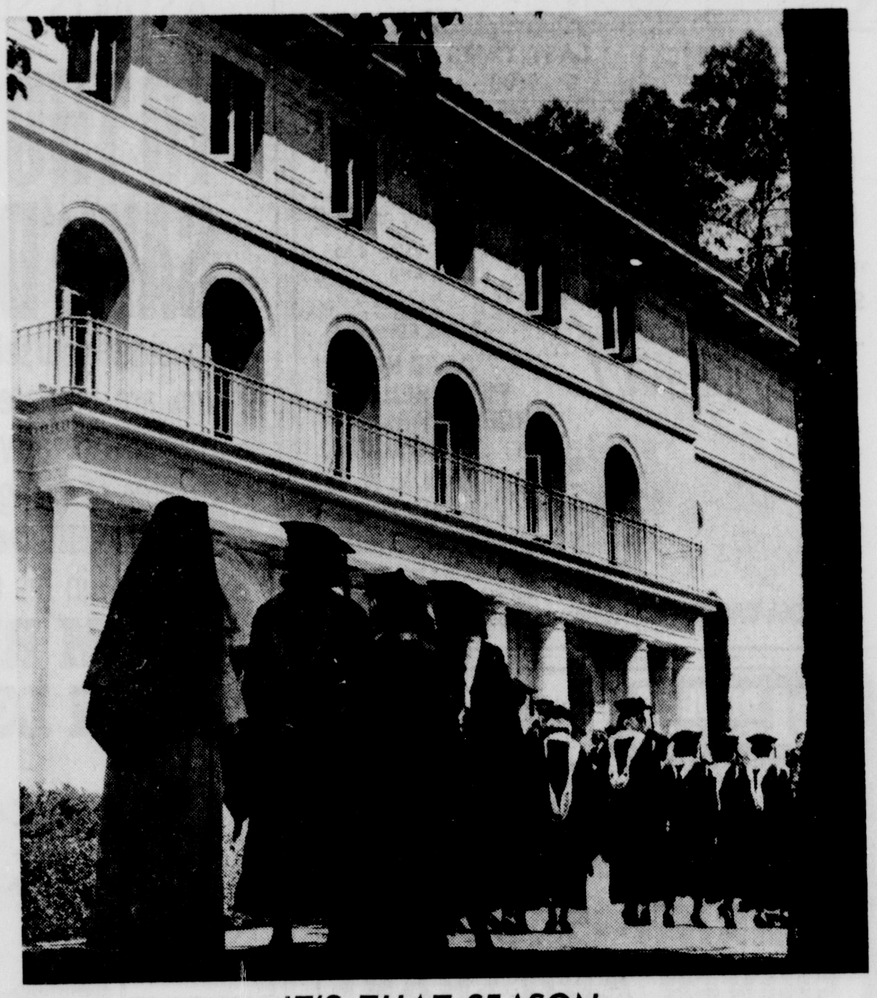
Span Transit Idea Study Is Ordered

Gov. Edmund G. Brown yesterday ordered a study to determine if the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge can be used for rapid transit.

He signed a bill by Sen. John F. McCarthy (R-San Rafael) directing the State Department of Public Works to make the study and report to the 1965 Legislature, convening next January.



IT'S THAT SEASON

Seventy-nine seniors at Dominican College file into Angelico Hall to receive their diplomas in one of Marin's first commencement exercises of the season yesterday. The students were greeted by Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken. They heard an address by Dr. Ronald McArthur, associate professor of philosophy at St. Mary's College, Moraga. WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Happy's 'Ex' Hinted Engaged

Thompson

The newspaper said he may shortly marry Victoria Thompson, who teaches at the exclusive Chapin School of Manhattan, and who for the past year reportedly has had one of the two Murphy girls in her class.

Miss Thompson's father is Charles G. Thompson, a New York attorney. The newspaper said announcement of the engagement has been kept secret because the couple did not want the public to know about it.

The former Margaretta "Happy" Murphy divorced her husband and married Rockefeller 33 days later. She and the governor are expecting a child before the Republican National Convention in San Francisco July 13. Rockefeller is seeking the GOP presidential nomination.

Top German Red In Russia

MOSCOW (AP)—East German Communist boss Walter Ulbricht has begun a 15-day visit to the Soviet Union, hinting that his hosts may make some new moves on the Berlin and German questions.

Ulbricht

Ulbricht told a Kremlin banquet in his honor Friday night that he had come to Moscow to "discuss a number of political problems."

In reply to a toast of welcome, he paid tribute to the Soviet policy of coexistence and added:

"We live in a country from whose territory two world wars were begun. It is in our country, in Germany, in the German Democratic Republic, that one must show how this policy is being applied in the most difficult spot in Europe."

Rusk In Thailand Visit

BANGKOK (UPI)—U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk arrived here today for a one-day visit and immediately plunged into a conference with American officials on the situation in neighboring Laos.

Khoman

When his special jet touched down at Donmuang Airbase, Rusk was met by Thai Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman and other high-ranking U.S. and Thai officials.

In a brief meeting with the press at the airfield, Rusk's aides said the scheduled Honolulu meeting of top U.S. foreign policy and defense officials on Monday and Tuesday will cover both political and military aspects of Southeast Asian affairs.

Asked if the situation in Southeast Asia was considered critical, Assistant Secretary of State William Manning said, "the situation certainly is critical . . . it is very serious, and that is why we are meeting in Honolulu."

Imposter In Trouble

MADERA (AP) — "The Great Imposter" must enter a plea in Superior Court here Friday on three counts of contributing to the delinquency of minors. During his career Demara has successfully impersonated a Trappist monk, a Canadian surgeon and a prison warden. His exploits were basis for two books and a movie.

Pierre Gets Backing

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Assemblyman Jerome Waldie (D-Antioch), Democratic majority leader of the assembly, has endorsed Pierre Salinger for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate. Waldie said yesterday that Salinger's close relationship with both the late President Kennedy and President Lyndon Johnson convinced him Salinger "is most able to fill the large shoes of Senator Clair Engle."

Big Jim Turns 76

NEW YORK (AP)—James A. Farley, 76 years old today, relaxed amid mementos of 50 years of political life — and looked happily toward Democratic prospects for this fall. Farley, who piloted the 1932 presidential campaign of Franklin D. Roosevelt, is a former Democratic national chairman, former postmaster general, and is now board chairman of the Coca Cola Export Co. He lives in New York City.

and said Anshen died from the effects of "barbiturates, alcohol and a liver ailment."

The petition said the award-winning architect left an estate worth more than $10,000, including real estate which draws an income of more than $5,000 yearly.

Anshen's partner, William Stephen Allen, was named executor in the will, which omits both of the late architect's former wives, except for providing for a property settlement agreement with his first wife, Eleanor Woods Anshen of Blue River, Ore.

TRUST FOR STEP-SON

It provides for a trust fund to finance the education of his son, John, 17, whom Anshen adopted when he married his second wife, Frances Anshen of Waldo Point. John's sister, Haven, 19, is described as having been "adequately taken care of" in the property settlement with her mother.

Remainder of the estate is bequeathed to Mrs. Rafetto, who, the Marin County Sheriff's Office has confirmed was at Anshen's house on DeSilva Island when it partially burned Sunday night.

Firemen said they saw the woman enter the burning house, wearing only pedal pusher pants and a light pink robe, and had forcibly to lead her outside. She later was questioned by the sheriff's office and an agent of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, but her name had not been released until yesterday.

ARSON INQUIRY

Sheriff's Inspector Marco Melovich has turned over evidence of fuel and electrical failure in the house to the State Bureau of Investigation and Identification to determine if arson was involved.

Anshen's body, clad only in shorts, was found by Allen in their office suite at 461 Bush Street, San Francisco, Monday morning.

Mrs. Rafetto, a divorcee, dined with Anshen, Allen and his wife, Jane, at the Allens' home at 168 Harrison Avenue, Sausalito, the evening of the fire.

Her address was listed in the petition as being the same as Allen's.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Dominican Graduate Feted At Luncheon In Sausalito

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

Mrs. Charles H. Merrill Jr. of Sausalito entertained at a luncheon Thursday honoring her daughter, Alice, before her graduation from Dominican Upper (High) School. Attending the luncheon were about 20 relatives and close friends of the young graduate, who will continue her studies at Stanford University.

Alice has two sisters, Mrs. William W. Sterling (Molly Merrill). The Sterlings are staying in the Sausalito home of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Gratama, who are traveling in Europe and will not be home until September. The other sister, Jenefer, attends the University of Washington in Seattle where she belongs to Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

MRS. LOUIS MURPHY of Corte Madera was honored at a farewell luncheon given by Mrs. Kenneth E. Simon of Loch Lomond Thursday. Because of a business transfer, Louis Murphy, his wife with their two children, Marc, who is two years old, and Christopher, six months old, are moving to San Diego. Louis, who is with Travelers Express, has been appointed manager of the San Diego office. Guests at the luncheon were Mesdames John Bishop of Strawberry, David Otis of Sausalito, John McNamara of San Anselmo, Allan Wann and Robert Scheiner of Corte Madera and Ross Allan Smith of San Rafael.

HECTOR BURR, the new consul general for Chile, who arrived Wednesday in San Francisco and his wife will be honor guests at the dinner dance at the Rafael Racquet Club to be given tomorrow night by the Marin County Chapter of the American Association for the United Nations. The party will be a benefit for the victims of the earthquake which destroyed fishing villages in Chile.

MRS. CLARENCE AMONETTE JR. of Ross was one of the models in the luncheon and fashion show Conrad Hilton gave a week ago today around the swimming pool on the 16th floor of the new Hilton Hotel in San Francisco. About 20 outfits were sent in for the show. One of these was the gorgeous gown Shirley MacLaine wears in "What A Way To Go." The gown, known as the diamond dress, was designed by Edith Head and is trimmed with silver cut crystal bugle beads, hand-cut diamond crystals, crystal teardrop beads and fur.

MRS. JERRY McDONOGH of Tiburon was honored at a tea Tuesday given by Mrs. Jim James and Mrs. Edgar Reed at the latter's home in Keil Cove. Invited to the farewell event were more than 50 friends from Belvedere, Tiburon and Mill Valley. Rules Are Made To Be Broken, So Eliminate That Back Seam

By EUNICE FARMER

"I have a beautiful, large splashy print fabric that I want to use for a simple dress. If I make a seam in the back it will spoil the pattern, can one ever eliminate the seam?" —Mrs. M. M. S.

Dear Mrs. M. M. S.:

I usually don't recommend a skirt without a center back seam. However, rules are made to be broken. In this case I would eliminate the back seam. Also, with any large patterened fabric, it is best to use a pattern with as few seams as possible, a broken up design loses the effect.

This week's winner of a tailor trix pressing board is Mrs. M. L. Schwarz, Portland, Ore., who sent this suggestion:

"In answer to 'what to do when you have ruined your dresses from perspiration stains,' here is my suggestion. Nothing is more in style today than jumper type dresses. Convert yours into a jumper by removing the sleeves and adding a contrasting blouse.

"Of course this won't work with every dress, but you should be able to salvage a few. Perhaps the neckline should be changed also, to look more like a jumper. Use your imagination and you'll be pleased with yourself as well as your creative ideas!"

"There's one thing I'll never understand in a pattern. When there is a curved seam in the bodice front or back (usually in suits) that extends into the sleeve seam, I never know how far to stitch the seam. No matter what I do, it will never lie straight and flat. Would love to hear from you!"—Mrs. C. S.

Dear Mrs. C.S.:

You will notice on almost every pattern of this type where the seam extends into the armhole, there will be a mark about ⅝ inch to 1 inch from the edge of the pattern at the point where the two seams end at the armhole.

Instead of stitching off the edge of the fabric, back stitch to the mark on your pattern. Next, clip straight in to the point where you have secured the stitching, and arrange seams so they will lie nice and flat. Hope this helps you and all of the others who have been concerned by this.

KNIT NOTES: "Some patterns call for making sweaters on circular needles and then cutting the sweater down the center front to make a cardigan. This cutting makes me so nervous, I'm afraid I'll ruin all my work. Isn't there another way to knit this sweater?"—Mrs. N. Q.

Dear Mrs. N.Q.:

You may still use the circular needles. However, divide the number of stitches for the entire front in order to find the center front. Knit back and forth from the center front around to the other center front (eliminating the side seams). This will save countless minutes counting rows to find out if they're even.

"Whenever there is a shawl collar on a pattern, I simply can't get the back to come out nice and smooth. How can I make nice smooth corners where the undercollar joins the neck edge?"—Mrs. H. M.

Dear Mrs. H. M.:

You are failing to "clip" your pattern before beginning to set in the undercollar; thus it pulls. This is a "type" of gusset detail, and is explained in detail in my leaflet on gussets. You may receive your copy by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope with 10 cents to Sew Simple.

Your Sewing Glossary: Stay: This is a separate piece of fabric cut to the exact size you should have when there is gathering or shirring. This not only serves as a guide, but will prevent the gathering from stretching.

and at least seven other County Services

The above services, now furnished by the County will still be paid for by the Tiburon taxpayers if incorporation is successful, but they will not be available unless paid for again plus an administration fee. Your County taxes will not be reduced because a City may take over these services, and a City Tax will soon be permanently imposed upon the residents of an incorporated Tiburon. If incorporated, Tiburon taxpayers would be paying more than twice for the above mentioned services.

WHAT IS THE ISSUE?

THE SIZE OF THE PROPOSED DISTRICT IS THE ONLY BASIC ISSUE

Do you want to establish one large school district, controlled by a single Board of Trustees, encompassing 16 INDIVIDUAL COMMUNITIES, which will ultimately serve approximately 60,000 children in 100 elementary schools and 10 high schools? Did you know that of the 158 unified districts in California, 143 unified districts have less than 2,000 children? YET IN 1970 this proposed Tam district would have more than 25,000 students.

A NO VOTE on June 2 will permit you to vote again, as early as November, 1964, on an alternative plan, providing 2 or 3 districts, local control of your School Board and taxes, and the right to set the level of the quality of education.

WHETHER TO HAVE UNIFICATION IS NOT THE ISSUE

Nearly everyone favors the combining of elementary and high schools into unified systems. The advantages are equally applicable to smaller districts, which are more manageable, more responsive to local control, and which reduce the threat of creating large school bureaucracy.

WHETHER TO EQUALIZE SCHOOL WEALTH IS NOT THE ISSUE

The base money available for education is about the same in all districts. The variance in income per child will be equalized by the Unruh Bill AB145 which provides additional money of $15 per child distributed to unified districts in accordance with their need.

WHETHER THE TAM PLAN IMPROVES EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR MINORITY GROUPS IS NOT THE ISSUE

The size of a school district does not determine policy on educational opportunities with respect to minorities but rather this is determined by the hearts of men.

A moderate size unified school district with 10 to 14 elementary schools can provide adequate funds for educating the culturally deprived and would be sufficiently large to meet all minority problems.

The Editor's Notebook

Extremists Use Extreme Words To Protest Label

IN RECENT DAYS, a batch of out-of-county anti-Rockefeller letters have arrived at Ye Olde Editor's desk. They come from a variety of eastern and mid-western states.

Most of them have several points in common. They denounce Governor Rockefeller for using "smear" or "hate" tactics against Senator Goldwater. They decry the idea that Senator Goldwater is backed by "extremists." The Goldwater-supporting writers of these letters almost unanimously insist they are not extremists.

BUT THEIR CHOICE of words leads one to think they must be deluding themselves.

"Bitter vituperation."
"Vendetta."
"Insinuation."
"Heinous low in American politicking."
"Savage assault."
"Violent attacks."
"Party-wrecking technique."
"Absolute phony."
"Transparent frauds."
"Cynical disdain."
"Rockefeller's masquerade."
"Collectivist policies."
"Socialism and cynicism."
"Bludgeoned."
"Rubber Stamp."
"Divisive tactics."
"Big money."
"Techniques of smear."
"Innuendo."
"Guilt-by-association."
"Spew hatred."
"Brainwashing good Californians."
"Deadly personal background."
"Crucify."
"Unjust accusation."
"Fabricated extremism."

ALL THESE EXTREMIST words were used against Governor Rockefeller in these letters which complain that Senator Goldwater's supporters are unfairly accused of being extremist.

It might be funny if it were not so fearful.

The Republican party would not benefit from having people of this ilk comprise its national convention. The nation would not benefit if people of this ilk became federal job holders in substantial numbers.

I DO NOT MEAN to imply that there are no reasonable people among Senator Goldwater's backers.

Take former Senator Knowland, the Goldwater campaign chief in California. He is the epitome of integrity.

But it is hard to believe that Senator Goldwater and former Senator Knowland could control a horde of supporters of the extremist kind represented by this batch of hate letters. They would more likely become the victims of the extremists. Such situations have occurred before in both parties.

Governor Rockefeller's supporters tend to be more moderate and more responsible. The Republican party would be better off in their hands. So would our nation should they come to fill government jobs.

BOUQUETS to the City of Sausalito for managing to come up with a budget that promises a tax rate cut of some 10 cents.

BOUQUETS to the League of Women Voters and other civic and political groups that have provided forums for candidates to meet the public and clarify the issues.

BRICKBATS to the increasing use of plate glass doors without accompanying safeguards to warn the public of the invisible barrier.

A BRICKBAT to the youngsters who turned the street signs at the corner of Molino Ave. and Edgewood Ave. around last week, thus causing the doctor and ambulance to lose some time getting to the home of a Mill Valley resident who had suffered a heart attack.

A BOUQUET to the Golden Gate Bridge board for authorizing funds to test pop-up lane divider tubes. The present ones do a good job, but when they get knocked loose to lie in the roadway they create a hazard as autos swerve to avoid them.

A BRICKBAT to the candidates who piously mouth criticism of billboards but plaster the countryside with their own garish campaign signs.

A BOUQUET to Sheriff Mountanos and to the board of supervisors for backing him up when he acted swiftly to strengthen his force of deputies at Marin City after an outbreak of racial violence there last weekend. BRICKBATS to those who did violence. But a BOUQUET to the offender who voluntarily turned herself in to the authorities after being "rescued" from sheriff's deputies by illegal force. A BOUQUET, too, to Supervisor Behr for suggesting that adding deputies only treats a symptom and that steps should be taken to cure the disease.

SOME QUESTIONS ON STRAIGHT THINKING

One effecitve way to improve your ability to think—and think straight—is to ask yourself questions such as these from time to time:

Am I interested in the full truth? Or do I settle for a superficial acquaintance with the facts?

Do I make sure that there is sufficient evidence to substantiate the truth of a statement that I am inclined to accept as fact?

Do I intend to let preconceived notions stand in the way of my getting the complete picture?

Am I using my mental powers to benefit others? Or do I focus my thinking only on self?

Do I separate the wheat from the chaff? Or do I habitually confuse incidentals with essentials?

Am I quick to pounce on the faults and failings of others while ignoring or glossing over my own?

God has given you marvelous powers of mind, heart and soul. If you use them not only for your own benefit but also for the common good of all men, you will live as well as think straight.

"And to one He gave five talents, to another two, and to another one, to each according to his particular ability."
(Matthew 25:15)

Help me unlock my hidden powers, O Lord, and employ them to make the world a better place.

Black Is Not Such Bad Color

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I was interested in the account of the speech by Louis Lomax in your issue of yesterday (May 23).

It seems to me Mr. Lomax is a wee bit self-conscious about the symbolism of the word black in our speech. Take his example of the black car running out of gas in the TV blurb. Sure, we think of black as an unfavorable color, but that has nothing to do with Mr. Lomax's skin. It's simply because night is black and its darkness is something of a depressant to us, just as sunlight is a cheering stimulant.

Take a few more instances. The black pearl is a rarity treasured for its air of mystery. I wear a "black diamond" tie clip from Alaska which I fancy is quite handsome. The mayor of San Francisco rides in a black limousine; so, I believe, do our governor and president. A black-tie affair, these days, is about as posh as they get. While the full-dress outfit is termed "white tie," its predominant color is black.

Black, then, is the color of night, of mystery, of romance, of the height of dignity and power.

Property Tax On Land Only Urged

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Homeowners in Marin had better beware of some of the proposals for property tax relief that are being discussed. Keep in mind that the property tax has two major parts: (1) tax on land, (2) tax on improvements. All reputable economists agree that these two taxes have opposite effects upon a community. A tax on improvements decreases job opportunities by discouraging the building industry. . . . But a tax on land increases job opportunities by forcing those who hold title to valuable sites that are underused or vacant to put their land to better use. . . .

. . . It is the under-taxation of land in the United States that permits land speculators to still withhold so much good land from use that the price of all land—including that under our homes — is driven higher and higher.

Every effort should be made, therefore, to increase that part of the property tax falling on land. . . . The State Constitution . . . requires that all cities and counties that tax land must tax improvements and personalty at the same rate. So if homeowners want tax relief . . . the way to get it is to demand a revision of the State Constitution so that cities and counties will be allowed to do what irrigation districts can do, e.g., levy the property tax on land only. . . .

Cancer Society Having Bad Year

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Thank you for the fine editorial April 20 on behalf of the American Cancer Society campaign. No one could ask for better year 'round news and feature coverage than we have received from your paper; your cooperation is sincerely appreciated.

I would like to bring you up to date on our annual campaign activities. This year our campaign organization has worked harder than ever to obtain volunteer workers for our house-to-house campaign. The volunteers we obtained worked very hard, but in many areas obtained less than in previous years, while some areas let us down completely. As a consequence, our results this year have not been as good as last year's results.

Because of the Cancer Society's research commitments and our own local service and education commitments, we are still attempting to reach everyone in Marin County not contacted. In some areas, we will contact by mail and in others, a volunteer worker will call. We wish to afford everyone an opportunity to read our life-saving pamphlet on early detection of cancer symptoms and to make a contribution.

Tam Valley Angry Over Annex Plan

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Over the years Tam Valley has developed an identity and personality of its own. One outgrowth of that development is the Shoreline Highway business strip and the adjacent Tam Valley Shopping Center. All this, says everyone (including the Greyhound), is Tam Valley Junction.

Now comes the Mill Valley City Council, per its manager, on the prowl for new tax money, seeking annexation of the above area. The whole Mill Valley citizenry, and especially its Chamber of Commerce, would do well to ponder the possible long-range ill effects of such a prehensile grab. Are not the good will and shoppers' dollars of adjacent unincorporated areas necessary ingredients of Mill Valley's future health?

In recent years several large business concerns have closed shop in Mill Valley, and moved elsewhere. Does this speak well for the "benefits" now bestowed on its taxpayers by Mill Valley? It would seem best for all concerned that, at least, Tam Junction should be omitted from the current annexation caper.

Tam, with Tennessee Valley (and growth), may one day wish to be an incorporated city. (Incidentally, these two valleys have a far greater buildable land area than Mill Valley.) Or Tam Valley may wish sometime to join with Sausalito. Why not? There is industry and healthy growth there.

Let us hope that this whole matter will resolve itself amiably — that Mill Valley will cease and desist in its precipitous and unilateral approach to Tam Valley. If not, two "negative" (?) results could follow:

1. This generation of Tam Valleyites will never vote to annex to Mill Valley.
2. Nor will they feel presently disposed to spend their shopping dollars there.

Cuba Exiles Boast Two Strings To Bow In Battle Against Castro

WASHINGTON — The Cuban exiles, who are stirring things up with new drive and daring, have two weapons.

One is military. The other is economic—the continuing and mounting deterioration of the Cuban economy.

THE NEW MILITARY harassment should not be lightly dismissed. Obviously, by itself it will not topple the regime. Its significance is not its size but its timing. It is beginning at the very moment when the internal economic decay is giving the Cuban government its most acute difficulties since Castro came to power.

The military harassment adds to the economic strain and makes it far harder for Castro to persuade the Cuban people that he can ever restore — let alone improve — the living conditions which prevailed before 1958.

Cuba's economic difficulties stem from the regime's egregious mismanagement, from its lack of access to U. S. goods, and from the refusal of many other countries to sell it needed products.

Here's how things have been going:

1. Despite the temporary boon of high sugar prices on the world market, which for a period fed Havana's foreign exchange, sugar prices are now declining and the prospect for the free-world purchase of Cuban sugar (the mainstay of its economy) is poor.

2. The whole Cuban economy has been moving backward. Cuba's gross national product had, by the end of 1963, slumped 10 to 15 per cent from the 1958 level of 2.56 billion dollars. Since its population increased from 6.5 to 7.1 million during these same five years, the per capita GNP is, in effect, down 20 per cent.

3. Cuban agricultural production has dropped substantially since Castro came to power: rice is off 26,000 tons, sweet potatoes down 364,000 tons, with milk, beef and pork all falling behind in varying degrees. And sugar output is at the lowest point since 1944. Attempted solution: labor manpower was drafted into the army and forced to work at reduced soldiers' pay.

By contract, the gross national product of the 19 other American republics gained an estimated 20 per cent from 1958 through 1963.

4. Cuba's industrial production has remained stagnant during the Castro period. Volume remains stuck and quality has gone steadily backward.

5. Even though the free-world boycott of Cuba is less than total, Cuban exports have fallen catastrophically —from 805 million dollars in 1958 to an estimated 475 million dollars in 1963.

6. Some 3,000 Cuban citizens are fleeing the island every month. Skilled labor is scarce and executive talent more scarce.

7. Today Cuba owes the rest of the world almost two billion dollars. Its debts to the Soviet Union and other Communist countries total nearly 650 million dollars for economic aid alone.

RECENTLY, A FRENCH Communist, an agrarian specialist, was summoned to Havana to diagnose Cuba's agricultural ills. His report has fallen into Western hands. It concludes that, unless something better is done soon, there will be "catastrophe."

THE ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON—President Lyndon B. Johnson is undertaking a new personal appeal to business and labor to hold the line on wages and prices.

THIS LATEST PLEA will be made at an unusual gathering — a joint dinner for some 80 or 90 business and union executives at the White House, followed by cabinet briefings and discussions.

This dinner is a follow-up on two others the president already has held — separate black-tie affairs for businessmen and laborites. At each the president urgently stressed the crucial necessity of averting strikes and increases in wages and prices.

Indicative of the importance the president attaches to this exceptional affair is that it is being arranged by Clifton Carter, his top political lieutenant.

Also, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, former head of Ford Motor Co., and at the president's behest working quietly to forestall an auto strike, is in charge of the briefings by cabinet members and other key officials.

A special report on the national economy and outlook will be presented by Walter Heller, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

It will take the form of a 24-page tabloid-sized color supplement that will be part of the Sunday, June 14, editions of 14 big-city newspapers in various parts of the country.

This unique political ad, titled "Mr. President: The Office and the Man," is being paid for by the "President's Club."

At this week's big fund-raising combination dinner and gala in Washington, more than 800 $1,000-a-plate tickets were sold for the "President's Club" dinner — at which the president and Mrs. Johnson were the stellar guests.

Mrs. Johnson's enthusiastic participation in these affairs is a significant portent of things to come.

The first lady will play a leading role in the fall election, and is busily preparing for that. She is being briefed by selected authorities and experts.

RUSSIA IS SECRETLY arming leftist-ruled Algeria to the teeth.

At the huge May Day celebration in Moscow, Algerian President Ben Bella was the top foreign guest, filling the role taken by Fidel Castro last year. Like the Cuban dictator, Ben Bella was presented a high Soviet decoration.

Particularly disturbing to NATO authorities is the strong possibility that Algeria may acquire SA-2 high-level anti-aircraft missiles.

SO LARGE HAS BEEN the Soviet armament build-up in Algeria that U. S. military authorities now refer to it as the "Mediterranean Cuba."

President Charles de Gaulle, who has been going out of his way to play footsie with the Reds, is reputedly greatly perturbed by this development.

Larger District Means Tax Vote?

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The following information appears in the minutes of the Marin County Augmented County Committee on School District Organization, the meeting of May 15, 1963:

"It was moved by Dr. Clark and seconded by Mr. Hermann that the committee recommend that a tax rate of $4.25 be recommended for the new unified district." Dr. Clark then reworded his motion to read, "A maximum tax rate of 25 cents above that established under Ed. Code Section 3130." This motion was carried.

Then at the next meeting, May 22, 1963, a letter from Mr. Benton Bostick Jr. was read to the committee, from which I quote: "Your requesting a 25-cent increase in the new unified district tax above the average tax for all the schools in the new district will almost surely mean that the unified high school district proposed, as well as the tax increase proposed, will be turned down by the voters."

Mrs. Wallace, of the committee, pointed out that if the election were timed properly, the new board would have over a year in which to plan its budget and ask the voters to approve whatever tax rate may be necessary. Mrs. Wallace then moved that the motion of May 15 be rescinded. The motion carried.

Does this suggest that the proponents of the Tam Unified District already realize that a large district would not be more economical and that a tax increase election would have to be our first proof of same?

Unification—Yes, But Not Too Large

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On June 2, voters in the Tam High School District will indicate whether or not they wish to group 38 elementary schools and three high schools into one large unified district.

If unified, the new district would begin with approximately 20,000 students but within 20 years would grow to 60,000. Does it have to be so large? Does bigness promote citizen interest and thereby quality education? No law specifies how large a unified district must be. The State Board of Education agrees that a well-rounded program can be adopted for a district of some 10,000 pupils.

The proposed unified district would spread over an area of 189 square miles. This area could be divided into two, three or four unified districts which would provide continuity in instruction from kindergarten through 12th grade for children in each area. If a division were made, the financial ability of each area to support its unified school district would not differ significantly.

Since the schools in this area rely on financial support from individual property owners primarily, the districts must not grow too large to maintain awareness and interest by these individuals in the needs of the pupils in the whole district.

Unification — yes, but not this large plan. Let us vote no on this unification proposal and unify into smaller districts which will be more apt to stimulate excellence in education.

An Appeal Is Made For Residence Home

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The following is a portion of the letter sent to the mayor of Larkspur and to the city councilmen, to be published in your "Letters to the Editor" column:

For the following reasons, I hope that the application of the Valley Investment Co. for permission to build a retired person's residence on Bon Air hill will be reconsidered:

(1) It would be a proper and constructive addition to the City of Larkspur. The presence of a well-run, permanent, dignified and nicely appointed residence could not help but bring credit and distinction to Larkspur.

(2) It will extend the hill upward rather than flatten it or pull it down into the marsh. If this unit were to be spread out, a hill would have to be leveled and consequently there would be loss of contour and loss of trees and shrubs.

(3) Within 10 years, there will undoubtedly be many buildings that extend above the hill lines. In Marin County, the land is more valuable than the air. We must face the fact that we must use the air space for building if we are to conserve land for outdoor living and recreation. The proposed building has charm in itself and, with proper color and detail, will not stand apart from the landscape in an obtrusive way.

(4) At the present time, retired persons of Marin County who want the security of a residence with medical facilities must move to the lower Peninsula. This means moving from familiar climate, friends and activities. After one has lived a good part of his adult life in this county, and chosen it for its beauty and cultural attraction, it is brutal to say, "Go away—we have no place for you now."

Discovery Group Gets High Praise

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The marvels of Marin, and more, were the treat for those of us attending the Camp Fire Discovery Trips this past year. Monthly explorations were conducted to acquaint Camp Fire leaders with the many beautiful and interesting outdoor spots our county so richly provides.

There are probably many people, such as I, who have lived in Marin County for several years and have never seen the salmon jumping the fish ladders near San Geronimo, picked up an arrowhead in Novato Creek, gasped on the suspension bridge at Point Bonita, found a rare wildflower above Marin City, admired the wintering Monarch butterflies at Bolinas, or thrilled to the sight of white pelicans circling in precision overhead.

Sharing these rewarding experiences with the Camp Fire leaders were representatives of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Audubon, Sierra Club, teachers, and others. And I know all these people share my feeling of gratitude and would like to thank the many individuals who were so generous to be host to the Discovery group.

Deserving of special praise are the organizers and "experts" of the Discovery Trips —Dorothy Kinkade and Elizabeth Terwilliger. As their love of nature and philosophies of conservation filter down to our children, surely all of Marin will be the beneficiary.

Write-In Is Urged For J. Walter Blair

Editor, Independent-Journal:

June 2 is coming real soon, and although it appears on the sample ballot of the people in the Third District that Behr is running unopposed, this is not so. There are a good many people intending to write in the name of J. Walter Blair. Sure hope they remember to put an X after it. . .

Blair was accused of costing the taxpayers $20,000 for the stop-work order on Taj Mahal (Civic Center). This was just a barrel of mumbo jumbo to put Blair in a bad spot, and justify his recall without cause. In the first place the fine never amounted to this figure and in the second place the charges were dropped.

Bill Fusselman is being accused of the same old thing. They (his opponents) are dishing out tripe in hopes of leading the people . . . to believe he cost the county $200,000 because he didn't make up his mind soon enough on the land purchase where old Taj stands today.

Anybody in Santa Venetia can tell you the owners of that land were most reluctant to sell. But having it slipped to them they would have to sell to the county naturally they bucked for a higher price. . . So negotiations took time and time marched on, but at last the deal was made. . .

County Administrator has tried to assure us on two occasions at least that "the county isn't going broke." On a recent KTIM Kitty Oppenheimer program Bruce let us . . . know that it wouldn't be long before only families with an income of $10,000 per year at the least could live in Swanky County: Marin. . .

Bruce says our budget goes up 4.8 per cent and our population 5.1 per cent. Seems to me the more taxpayers we draw to Marin the lesser the tax burden on all of us. If Bruce and the Marin Council for Civic Affairs would knock off passing out new jobs, complete with titles and high salaries maybe we could ease off on a lot of county expense. . .

Unification 'No' Vote Is Urged

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On June 2, voters in the Tamalpais Union High School District will make a decision which will affect profoundly the education of their children and that of generations yet to come. I speak, of course, of the election to unify the high school district with all the elementary schools within its boundaries.

I am amazed to learn . . . that there are some people who still do not know that a "Yes" vote will wipe out all 11 elementary districts and their governing boards and will also put the present high school district and its governing board out of existence. In their place there will be one brand-new unified district governed by a new board of seven trustees. . . . One administration will replace 12, but not one administrator will lose his job because the law protects him. . . .

This unification proposal should be rejected . . . for many reasons. It will not provide cheaper education costs; instead taxes will increase to provide services now given some elementary schools by the County Schools Office and to offset the increase in teachers' salaries caused by placing all teachers on the single salary schedule, which will have to be the highest in effect since otherwise some teachers would be forced to take a cut in pay. It will be no more likely to solve any problems of segregation since the same high school attendance areas will remain. . . . It will reduce or remove local control by eliminating 11 local elementary boards, reducing the number of elective positions (unpaid trustees) by 51. . . . It will remove the people's ability to remove from office those trustees who do not represent their electorate, since trustees elected at-large can be continually re-elected by voters living outside their own community. . . . Although the law allows other forms of school district organization only unification was considered. All other unification plans were swept aside without sufficient consideration of their merits; only this monster proposal, twice before rejected in augmented committee studies, is being presented to the voters. . . .

Let's Get A Local Peace Corps Going

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Your editorial about Marin and foreign aid (May 25) is most welcome. I hope it will be taken as a call to action by other community leaders.

The private, individual initiative, home rule idea has been talked about long enough. The question is one of initiative. Is local initiative adequate for the task? This is one of the most important issues for the fall elections. The public should have a chance to decide which source of initiative works best—local or national/international initiative . . .

One index of local initiative might be pledges by Marin business organizations to provide transportation funds (round-trip) for 100 or so Marin adults to go to Latin America. Another Index might be the amount of funds and help with the Northern California Freedom from Hunger program to aid southern Chilean fishermen. Still another index might be the interest by Marin newspapers as reflected by space and prominence given to local foreign aid activities.

A further index might be the establishment by some group or combination of Marin groups of a place where people could volunteer to work abroad. Developing this mechanism for determining how many people with what skills and interests would like to be world volunteers should be one of the best arguments for those who are sincerely interested in decreasing national government foreign aid programs. Also, we should be able to expect that this local world volunteer center will have determined by next October if it wants to cooperate with the California-Chile program . . .

The public should make its judgment in the fall political campaigns because we cannot afford the luxury of waiting until 1966 or 1968 to determine which political philosophy about the world we want from our representatives . . .

We need to decide soon if local initiative is an effective alternative to the editorial's contention that "The Peace Corps and other tax-supported foreign aid programs bog down in sheer bulk." This decision should not be based on response from Washington alone, as the editorial seems to imply. We should determine if local leaders who believe in the local initiative philosophy can demonstrate adequate interest and action by October.

Time Is Now For Larkspur Bonds

Editor, Independent-Journal:

With the rapid approach of the June 2 election, I feel grave concern about the Larkspur School District community's attitude toward education. . . .

I have no sympathy or patience with the group, using their gripes against federal, state or local governments as justification to vote NO on school taxes and bonds, regardless of need, because this is the only area in which they have direct control in setting the rate.

The need is here! The time is now! Larkspur School District is broke. Bond monies are needed to construct additional rooms to house the yearly growth of more than 100 new students this district has been gaining for several years. The tax monies are needed for new teachers to handle the school population growth and to bring their and the classified people's salary schedule in line with the surrounding districts — not the top but in the upper half at least; not the bottom, as it is now.

Some of the Larkspur school yard conditions are so bad the insurance broker is talking of not renewing the liability insurance. Two roofs leak drastically. One school's surrounding ground has settled away from the foundation and rats have been seen scurrying beneath. This sounds ridiculous, and it is. But with a reserve fund of hundreds rather than thousands of dollars, as it should be, what can be done?

Several teachers have resigned. This represents a loss of valuable experience. A new teacher, no matter how good, hasn't the background and understanding that our children need now. Some of the teachers leaving have stated their reasons are not only to better their salaries, but to offer their energies to districts where voters not only have the foresight to provide the facilities needed, but also the supplies necessary for an above-average education. It is one thing to work for a below-average salary if you can get the satisfaction of doing your best under optimum conditions, but if you must also make do with make-shift and/or self-purchased materials, this finally becomes the "straw that broke the camel's back."

Having gotten this off my chest, I would urge every registered voter to go to the polls June 2 and vote as his conscience dictates. If the group of citizens, feeling as I do, should again be in the minority, perhaps we had best join the growing group, documented, who are moving to other areas because of their fear that this school district is going downhill and those who for the same reason have refused to purchase homes in this area.

No Sample Ballots On Tam Unification

Editor, Independent-Journal:

On June 2 voters in the Tamalpais Union High School District will vote on the formation of a unified school district, and will also vote for members of the governing board of this new district if it is formed. The county clerk has recently completed mailing of sample ballots and other election information. Because voters in the Tamalpais Union High School District received sample ballots for the primary election but not for the unification election, several questions have arisen about procedures being followed.

This election is known as a "combined" election; that is, the school election is held at the same time as the primary, but is not consolidated with it. School law does not permit us to mail sample ballots at the present time. Although sample ballots have been mailed in previous elections, the provisions of law which govern mailing of sample ballots for school elections (Section 950 of the California Education Code) was repealed by the 1963 Legislature. We realize that this results in an unfortunate situation, particularly in an election of such importance. We hope that with the assistance of our excellent public press we may fill this gap and provide the voters with information which would otherwise have been contained in this sample ballot.

I should like to say at this point that the county clerk has been most cooperative in assisting us with this election. He has been most helpful in our attempts to insure that this complicated school election proceeds as smoothly as possible.

As a convenience to voters, we have arranged to have the county clerk handle absentee ballots for the School District Organization Election. This means that voters need apply at but one office for sample ballots for both elections.

The office of the county superintendent of schools is a service organization, not only to schools and school districts, but also to the general public. In order for this office to offer the maximum of service and to provide full and objective information to all the people, the county superintendent is not making a public statement either for or against unification in the Tamalpais Union High School District.

In closing, I wish to remind you that the county superintendent of schools office is as close to you as your telephone. We shall be happy to answer your questions or to provide you with information about the unification election to be held in the Tamalpais Union High School District on June 2.

Funds Are Put To Proper Use

Editor, Independent-Journal:

As a follow-up to your editorial (May 2) about Golden Gate Fields, I am enclosing herewith a list of all of the contributions made by Golden Gate Fields Foundation from Nov. 30, 1947, to date. During this period of time these contributions have been handled through my office by a non-profit charitable organization consisting of five members, the membership being changed from time to time for one reason or another. For a number of years, until just recently, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz was a member of the Board

The expenses incurred in distributing the funds reflected on the enclosed list amounted to $2,550.70, or approximately 0.4% of the amount distributed. These expenses include long distance telephone calls to the California Horse Racing Board in Los Angeles and the payment to one of our secretaries of $100 per year for many years and $300 per year for the last two years. It does not include the cost of stationery or stamps, as these are furnished by my office. Mrs. Mitchell, the secretary mentioned, for her $100, or presently $300, per year salary, answers all of the letter and telephone requests for funds, which, as you can imagine, are numerous; keeps the files and minutes of the meetings of the Board of Directors; handles all of the communications between the Foundation and the California Horse Racing Board, which Board must approve every expenditure made. The records of the Foundation are periodically audited by the Internal Revenue Department and, incidentally, they have never found an error.

As you will see from the enclosed list, we have never at any time given any money to San Francisco or any other newspapers to underwrite promotions such as tennis and swimming meets, or for any other purpose. Also, I had never heard of the Hamilton Air Force Officers' Wives Club until I read your editorial. I hope you will publish the true facts of the situation.

The Foundation received $8,839.57, only, from the 1963 fall meeting. This has not been distributed, except for $1,000 to the local Cerebral Palsy Assn., which was going on the rocks because of lack of funds. Superior Court Judge William McGuiness is the president of this organization and is doing a great job.

Transit Study Funds Under Nose

Editor, Independent-Journal:

"We need to find some source of tax revenues to build and maintain a rapid transit system," you assert in your editorial of this date (May 21). Look no further! First-hand observation will show anyone who cares to look that the prime economic effect of a new bridge is to raise the selling price of land made more accessible by the bridge. The United States Government is still paying for the Hoover Dam, yet the profits made in land speculation in the Imperial Valley in the first 10 years of the dam's existence amounted to more than the total cost of the dam. I believe that the speculative increases in land value in Marin County in anticipation of the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge were nearly as great as the cost of the bridge.

The situation with rapid transit is exactly the same. It has been studied in great detail along the routes of the subways and elevateds in New York. It is unreasonable for certain landholders to reap the full profit of the increment of land values added by public improvements, while the public is stuck with the bill, and pays fares or tolls in addition. Unfortunately, a State Constitutional Amendment is required to enable any government agency to take the total unearned increment, but at least the full legal assessment of 20 per cent of the market value of raw land should and must be made. Mr. Broemmel is doing a better job in this respect than any other assessor in the state, but he does so in the face of a great deal of resistance on the part of land profiteers, with a minimum of support from the public. Truly, is it anything but preferential robbery to tax the land speculator's property at 3 per cent of its market value, while my home and yours, my business and yours, is taxed at 20 or 25 per cent?

Mother Says School Official Hard To See

Editor, Independent-Journal:

How does a taxpayer and parent see the elusive superintendent of Novato School District? I would like to know the exact function of the superintendent of the Novato School District. I have tried to have an audience with Mr. Bunker, superintendent of Novato schools, and was refused permission to see him by his secretary, who said she was acting on his instructions.

We have two children who previously attended Novato High School. Recently an incident arose that I felt unjust, involving one of our children. Wishing to straighten out the matter, I called the superintendent of Novato Schools, Mr. Bunker, to discuss the matter with him. Apparently he sees only a select few, and I was not among the chosen few. Incidentally, I called four times within a week, asking to please discuss the matter with Mr. Bunker. Each time Mr. Bunker was out, and his secretary insisted on taking all data and relaying latter, that he did not care to talk about with me. Nor could I make an appointment with him. I realize he must be a very busy man, but was under the impression that he was a fair man and would hear both sides to an incident. Teachers are not infallible, or are they?

Mrs. KATHERINE WILLEY
Novato

(Superintendent Bunker advises that he had a previous meeting with Mrs. Willey and that he offered to meet with her again under conditions which she had not accepted as this is written. Superintendent Bunker wants to have other parties to the dispute present when Mrs. Willey presents her case.—Editor)

Youth In Marin Support Demanded

Editor, Independent-Journal:

For a local newspaper that dominates Marin County, the I-J has a far greater responsibility to the people and organizations than it has so far fulfilled. I'm speaking specifically of the May in Marin program . . . May 23, Youth in Marin Day.

Why is that when youth organizations join forces . . . to educate the general public . . . your paper cannot see fit to provide adequate, even beyond the "call of duty," promotion? . . .

How many people recall reading of the good works of youth agencies in your paper when they read your coverage of juvenile delinquency? Sure, you had previous coverage. A 130-word article in Thursday's paper. . . . Evidently many people did not "get the message."

A county that has as little for youth to do as Marin needs a newspaper that will take the leadership. . . . I feel that the tight-fistedness of a population with one of the highest incomes is partially attributable to the lack of knowledge . . . of county-wide needs. . . . You certainly find the space to cover the stock market investments. Aren't our youth a stockpile of investments worth far more than dollars?

. . . I waited for the Monday paper to read of the Youth in Marin activities. . . . You put in one picture of "Bridge Builders." Your caption stated, "Members of several Marin County youth organizations built . . . during the day-long 'Youth in Marin' program, which several hundred youngsters and adults attended."

. . . "Members of several Marin County youth organizations" did not build that bridge. The Boy Scouts . . . should get the credit for it. The "several hundred youngsters and adults . . ." should have been "several thousand" and might well have been if adequate coverage had been given. . . .

What of the 98 per cent of our youth who do not get into trouble? What per cent of the space devoted to youth in your paper do they get?

Residence Home Plan Is Backed

Editor, Independent-Journal:

The community of Larkspur is being asked to consider a request for a variance of an existing ordinance for construction of a multi-story retirement residence. Undoubtedly, requests to build similar types of construction will be made from time to time in other communities. Because of the residential and natural characteristics of Marin County, an attitude opposing all multi-story construction is easy to acquire. A more rational attitude, however, is one requiring a decision that is made on the basis of merit, or lack of merit, of each request. . . .

Three criteria, expressed as questions, can be used as guidelines in this instance. First, is there a need for housing of this type in Marin County? Second, will the proposed structure be in character with the surroundings in which it is to be located? Third, will it contribute to the community welfare? The answer to each of the above is "yes."

That retired people have peculiar needs in the areas of housing, recreation and health is now a fact accepted by authorities who are informed of social change and need. . . .

The site for the project on Bon Air Hill is centrally located in an area composed of residential multi-unit dwellings, churches, schools, a hospital and a shopping area. An attractive, high-quality retirement residence would appear to be compatible with the existing neighborhood. . . .

Projects such as the proposed retirement residence are designed to take care of tomorrow's needs. This structure, by its very nature, should be serving Marin County well into the middle of the 21st Century. . . .

. . . A quality housing project proposed for . . . Larkspur would be a credit to Marin County.

Another Bridge Is Called Answer

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Permit our association to express to you our most sincere appreciation of your recent editorial regarding the idea of a rapid transit system for Marin County. The very straightforward statements of the railroad company, who surely ought to know something of the commute business, having been engaged in this particular business for many years, should convince the most skeptical that ANY rail rapid transit system for Marin County will mean a ruinous property tax subsidy from the taxpayers to keep it going. This was the stand of our association from the very first talk of getting Marin County into this rapid transit business.

To all businessmen and politicians too, it should be self evident that Marin County is a motor transport county with no railroad facilities. The only sensible way for a solution of our commuter problem is for the present Golden Gate Bridge District, which has ample funds to do this—make a definite survey for another bridge via Angel Island and Tiburon. This district could float and finance a sufficient bond issue to construct this new bridge and it would not cost the taxpayers one cent as the entire bond issue could be easily paid off from revenue from the two bridges. What more simple answer can you get for the solution of future transportation and commuter traffic for Marin County?

Opposes Real Estate Sales Tax Proposal

Editor, Independent-Journal:

If Supervisor Peter Behr thinks his proposal for a 3 per cent sales tax on real estate solves anything, in my opinion his thinking should be revised. If Supervisor Behr would analyze public expenditures, it could be that his findings would offer a constructive key that would open the door to an economy program.

Raising taxes is not an outstanding accomplishment. Instituting an economy program could be outstanding even if a toe-stepping procedure occurred.

The homeowner has two choices—move or cut down his daily budget and pay all the taxes.

If one buys or sells real estate now, an analysis of the title company's closing statement is frightening. Fees for title insurance, insurance fees, loan fees, tax service fee, pay-off loan penalty fee, etc., etc. Add to this a sales tax fee and one would be lucky to have a couple of coins in his pocket to rub together upon sale of his home.

NEW CHURCH IN LARKSPUR—Drawing by architect Donald Powers Smith gives preview of First Christian Science church now under construction at Magnolia Avenue and Bahr Lane. In right background may be seen Sunday school building, also under construction. The two structures will be connected by a passageway.

New Church Building In Larkspur

Construction began this week for Larkspur's First Christian Science Church. The congregation hopes to begin use of the new sanctuary and Sunday school annex within six to eight months.

The gracefully modern, one-story structures are being constructed by W. S. Meinberger and Son of San Rafael, with O. C. Jones and Son of Berkeley doing the excavating and paving work. Estimated cost of the project is $99,000.

The two buildings, to be located on gently sloping hillside at the corner of Magnolia Avenue and Bahr lane, are designed by widely-known architect Donald Powers Smith. Rising from a massive "deck" structure, will be six massive columns supporting a sweeping, inverted gull-wing of a roof, with wide overhang. Much glass will be used in the church structure, and the sanctuary proper will feature skylights in the wooden-beamed, arched ceiling, the architect's drawings show.

The Larkspur congregation presently meets in the Masonic Temple at 1122 Magnolia Avenue.

It has been an authorized branch of the Mother Church in Boston since 1952, and was first established as a Society in 1949.

Land for the church's first building of its own was acquired several years ago. In addition to the church and Sunday school buildings, adequate parking space will be provided.

Tiburon Church To Dedicate New Nursery-Sunday School

Dedication services for the new classroom building at the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Richardson Bay, 240 Tiburon Boulevard, will be held tomorrow at the 9 a.m. service.

Rev. George Walker, pastor, will devote his sermon to the dedicating of the building which will serve as the weekday home of the Tiburon Peninsula Nursery School and the lower grade level church Sunday school.

Completion of the new facility is the result of two years of cooperative planning between the nursery school corporation and the church. The architect is Michael Wornum and the builder, A. A. Hemmerling.

An open house, under direction of the nursery school corporation, will be held in the afternoon from 1 to 4 p.m., according to Mrs. Gerald Noble of Belvedere, president of the Belvedere Nursery School Corporation which operates both the Tiburon and Belvedere schools.

Novato Mission Sets Family-Style Outing

Holy communion will be held at 11 a.m. at St. George's Chapel. Games and swimming will follow the service and families are requested to bring a picnic lunch.

Series Of Groundbreakings Planned At Universalist Site

Not one groundbreaking, but a series of them will take place at 11 a.m. tomorrow, celebrating the construction start of the new edifice for the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Marin.

Individual members of the church will break ground for separate rooms of the future structure.

The site is at the end of Channing Way, Terra Linda, off Professional Center Parkway.

Presiding will be Rev. Karel F. Botermans, minister of the church; former minister Rev. Samuel A. Wright, now director of in-service education of the Starr King School for the Ministry in Berkeley, and Rev. Victor Goff, executive director of the Pacific Central district in the Unitarian Universalist Association.

Also participating will be G. William Bauer, president of the Marin church's board of directors, and Dr. John C. Siemens, building committee chairman.

Following the ceremony, church members and friends will participate in a potluck lunch at the site. Shuttle-bus service will be provided from Channing Way to the grounds; motorists are requested not to park at the groundbreaking site itself.

Rice won $200 for his "Mosaic Owl" and Varda won an equal amount for his "Night in Peking."

Memorial Day crowds have filled the campsites at Samuel P. Taylor Park for the first time this year, Neil Power, park supervisor, reported.

Campsites were filled at 4:30 p.m. yesterday and eight families were waiting for sites this morning, he said.

There were still picnic facilities open this morning, but Power said he expected they would fill up today.

CORE Pickets Pay Sausalito Bank A Visit

About 20 persons peacefully marched in a Congress of Racial Equality picket line in front of the Sausalito branch of the Bank of America yesterday between 4 and 6 p.m.

A majority carried signs attacking alleged discriminatory hiring practices of the bank. There were about five Negroes in the picket line, according to Frank Bosl, bank manager.

In Berkeley, approximately 250 pickets, mostly college and high school students, marched on the sidewalk outside the Berkeley main branch of the bank. Twenty others marched in front of the Oakland Grove Street branch.

Negotiations between CORE and bank officials broke down two weeks ago when the bank refused to show the hiring records demanded by CORE.

Young Bicycle Rider Tangles With Auto

Dana David Ewell, 7, of 27 Delwood Court, San Rafael, was in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital yesterday where he was held for observation after his bicycle collided with a moving car at 3:50 p.m. yesterday.

San Rafael police said the accident occurred at the corner of Knight Drive and Delwood Court. Detailed report of the accident was not complete, but the youngster apparently rode his bike into a car driven by Beatrice R. Culver of Anchorage, Alaska.

He was being observed for possible head injuries, the hospital reported.

Atomic Bomb Pioneer Dies In La Jolla

LA JOLLA, Calif. (UPI) — Dr. Leo Szilard, a nuclear physicist who played a pioneering role with Italian Enrico Fermi in early studies that led to development of the atomic bomb died today at his home, San Diego county coroner's deputies reported.

He was 66 years old.

The Hungarian-born physicist and Fermi devised the chain reaction system, composed of uranium and graphite used in establishing chain reaction in 1942 at the University of Chicago.

He most recently had been associated with the Salk Institute of Biological Studies, the institute named for Dr. Jonas Salk of polio vaccine fame.

Dr. Szilard was born Feb. 11, 1898 in Budapest and educated as an engineering student at the Budapest Institute of Technology. He received his doctorate of philosophy degree at the Univesrity of Berlin in 1922.

In 1937, Dr. Szilard came to the United States. He became a naturalized citizen in 1943.

compelling reasons why you should vote for

Ernest N. Kettenhofen

for Supervisor:

The qualities that have made Ernest N. Kettenhofen a successful Marin County businessman can be utilized by District 2 and the community on the Board of Supervisors.

Responsive to the needs of his neighbors and community, Ernest N. Kettenhofen has been working energetically in a volunteer capacity for numerous public service organizations for more than 15 years.

Elected to the Marin General Hospital Board of Directors by a sizable majority, he was elected President of the Board a year and a half later, and continues to serve as President. He is on the Citizen Advisory Board of the College of Marin, the Board of Governors of the California Maritime Academy, the Marin Senior Citizens Coordinating Council, and many other community groups.

Energetic in performing his duties, Ernest N. Kettenhofen has waged a vigorous campaign since the announcement of his candidacy back in November, 1963. He has carried his campaign to the people:

Never once turning down a request to appear at a public meeting,
Visiting hundreds of homes in neighborhoods throughout the community,
Establishing a headquarters in a convenient and accessible location, and,
Refusing to accept support from any one group or political organization to prevent any possibility of a political debt.

Dedicated to accentuating the positive, Ernest N. Kettenhofen is the only candidate who has devoted hours of research and person-to-person conferences with heads of City, County, State and Federal agencies. Out of these discussions, and out of the many years of his own business and civic experience, he has developed a program with specific guidelines for the future of the District and County. This program includes specific proposals for:

Building more and better roads without using the taxpayer's money,
Providing flood control in Ross Valley without destroying the area's natural beauty,
Selecting an alternate route to West Marin without tearing up populated areas,
Providing tax relief for the elderly,
Allowing employment of teenagers in a newly constituted Parks and Recreation Department, and,
Stimulating better advance planning and more cooperation between the citizens, cities and county.

Your vote for Ernest N. Kettenhofen for Supervisor will act as a catalyst for action in the Second District and Marin County: the big step toward providing the Responsive, Energetic, Dedicated leadership needed to protect Marin County's natural beauty and heritage, and move the community forward effectively and efficiently.

Working for you and Marin's future

Attorney Asks Death Case Data

Peter Allen Smith, Marin County public defender, said today he will seek a writ from District Court of Appeals in San Francisco forcing access to certain information for trial of John Lee King, 28-year-old murder suspect.

Smith seeks access as King's attorney to names, addresses, and statements of all intended prosecution witnesses of Marin County district attorney's office.

The information has been denied by Marin Superior Court Judge Richard M. Sims Jr.

Smith said he will also ask the district court to force delay of the scheduled June 9 trial. King and Robert Lee Jones, 25, are jointly scheduled for the trial in the March 27 Sausalito murder of Donald G. Corbett Jr.

Meanwhile, Thomas P. Boyd, attorney for Jones, said yesterday his client has voluntarily submitted to a lie detector test, but Boyd refused to reveal the results. King was given such a test shortly after his arrest prior to Allen's appointment as counsel.

Woman Arrested On Charges Of Failure To Pay

Vivian LaVonne Metcalf, 42, operator of Fairhaven Christian Science Rest Home, 1373 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, was arrested Thursday on a felony complaint charging five counts of failure to pay salaries, each amounting to over $200.

She appeared in Marin Municipal Court for arraignment yesterday but hearing was continued until next Thursday at 1:30 p.m. at request of her counsel. She was released on her own recognizance.

Mrs. Metcalf, of 3 Marinita Avenue, San Rafael, allegedly failed to pay salaries of Amy B. Jacobs from April 22 to June 1; Anna Mae Dangerfield, from Nov. 1 to Dec. 12; Carolyn E. Moers, from Oct. 15 to Dec. 4; Eula Mae McCrary, from Sept. 17 to Nov. 23, and Jodie Mae Cummings, from Oct. 15 to Nov. 27, all in 1963.

Bolinas Harbor Unit Budget Remains Same

Bolinas Harbor District commissioners Thursday adopted a preliminary 1964-65 budget of $8,500, the same figure as the current budget, and heard that the tax rate, now 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation, is expected to go down due to the normal increase in assessed valuation.

A resolution was passed adopting a 50-year lease with Bahia Baulines, Inc., to permit the Finley family to build a boating and recreation marina on the eastern shore of Bolinas Lagoon. The lease was approved May 7 subject to certain minor changes in wording which have now been made, reported Gene W. McDaniel, president of the commission.

Woman Campaigner To Get Brown's Help

Gov. Edmund G. Brown plans to spend a day in Marin sometime in September to help campaign for Vera Schultz for state senator, Mrs. Schultz's campaign manager Jody Becker disclosed yesterday.

Mrs. Becker said the governor told Mrs. Schultz: "You will be a great senator, a leader and a fighter."

Mays Admits, 'I'll Be Lucky To Hit .300'

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays, his batting average dropping further below .400, figures he'll be lucky to hit even .300 this season.

"No kidding," said the center fielder for the San Francisco Giants. "I'll settle for .300 right now. It's tough to hit .300 today."

Mays was hitless last night against the New York Mets in three trips as the Giants lost, 4-2. He carried a .379 average into today's game with rookie Ron Herbel (2-0) going against the Mets' Jack Fisher (2-3), an ex-Giant.

Giant right-hander Jack Sanford had a no-hitter for 6⅓ innings last night. Then Frank Thomas hit a long fly to center that Mays got in his glove but couldn't hold because he crashed into the fence.

The blow went for a triple as Mays caught his spikes under the fence and couldn't arise to throw the ball quickly into the infield. Red Kanehl, who had walked, scored.

Joe Christopher singled in Thomas and Jim Hickman homered for the Mets' four runs. Those three hits were all Sanford allowed as his record dropped to 4-5. Winner Tracy Stallard (3-6) pitched a four-hitter.

Mays walked, stole second and scored on Orlando Cepeda's single in the fourth for the first Giant run. Jim Davenport scored the other in the seventh on a walk, a sacrifice and a single by Jim Hart.

A crowd of 55,062, largest to watch baseball in new Shea Stadium, turned out to see Mays return to the city where he was a hero when the Giants homed in New York's Polo Grounds.

Instead, the fans watched the Mets knock the Giants into second place, .005 per cent behind the Philadelphia Phillies.

They got a scare when Mays crashed into the fence.

"The ground was very soft out there," Mays said. "My foot slipped when I leaped for the ball. Otherwise, I would have caught it."

Mays, 33, has predicted that his fielding won't suffer as he grows older. But he didn't mention this in his talk Friday about hitting.

"When I first came up to the big leagues, they told me if I could hit .300 I got nothing to worry about," continued Mays.

"Well it gets tougher and tougher. Not because I'm getting old. It's the schedule with all the traveling and night flying it takes a lot out of you.

"When I'm playing I forget that I'm tired. But it catches up with me. That's why I need a rest every once in a while.

"I believe a fellow who plays like I do should be given a rest every now and then. I mean get away from the park—forget about baseball," Mays said.

Pagan Sidelined; Long Sets Record

NEW YORK (AP)—Shortstop Jose Pagan has a torn muscle in his lower left rib cage and will be out approximately two weeks, the San Francisco Giants said yesterday.

Pagan was hurt while striking out in the fifth inning at St. Louis Thursday night.

Shot Put Record

LOS ANGELES—Dallas Long again shattered his own world shot put record last night by heaving the 16-pound ball 66 feet, 3½ inches in the Southern Pacific AAU championships at Occidental College. The performance bettered Long's 1962 official world record of 65-10½ and a pending record of 65-11½ earlier this season.

Boxing Figure Dies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Donn J. Shields, former chief inspector of the California Athletic Commission, has died in a San Francisco convalescent home. He was 82.

Shields was the author of the initiative approved by California voters in 1924 that made boxing legal in the state through a constitutional amendment.

Shields, who died Thursday, also promoted boxing and wrestling in Sacramento.

USC Wins Opener

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Southern California's baseball team had an edge over the University of Oregon today going into the second of a three-game series which determines who plays in the College World Series.

The Trojans took a 5-0 game from Oregon yesterday on the basis of Walt Peterson's four-hit pitching and five Oregon errors. A third game, if needed to determine the National Collegiate Assn. District 8 champion, was to be played later today.

Sports Artist Dies

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lyle Brown, nationally syndicated sports cartoonist, died yesterday of an apparent heart attack while playing golf on the San Francisco Olympic Club course. He was 54.

Brown was the originator of the "Sports Quiz" panel, which appears in a number of newspapers in the United States.

Golf Pros Take A Rest As Cars Grab Indy Spotlight

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Already under bitter criticism from many of the pros for its condition, the course for the $70,000 Speedway Open Golf Tourney was transformed today into a combination parking lot and picnic ground for a quarter of a million persons.

The fifth-richest sponsored tourney on the PGA tour was suspended between the third and final rounds while the auto racing faithful flocked to the $500,000 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Groundskeepers hauled 57 truckloads of debris off the course after last year's Memorial Day revelers departed. Half of the course is inside the race oval.

Belting George Bayer barely kept a grip on the lead yesterday with a one-over-par 72 that included only two birdies. It gave him a three-round total of 205 and kept him just one stroke ahead of four pros in hot pursuit of the $12,000 top prize.

Novato Clinches Freshman Pennant

Novato High School clinched undisputed championship of the Marin Athletic League freshman baseball race yesterday by downing second place Redwood 6-2. Novato finished with a 9-1 won-lost record as compared to Redwood's 7-3.

The winners blasted Redwood ace Kevin Wilson for six straight hits in a four-run third inning, including doubles by Jerry Gaeir, Frank Perachiotti and Gary Dinkel.

'64 Cal Hunting Dates Set; Aug. 8-Sept. 30 Deer Season

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hunting regulations for 1964 were approved yesterday by the California Fish and Game Commission, but still to be decided is the legality of deer hunting in four Northern California counties.

Commission President Henry Clineschmidt said it was up to the attorney general's office to settle the legal question involving a technicality in 1963 legislation which stipulated the seasons in Modoc, Lassen and sections of Siskiyou and Shasta counties must be the same length this year as last.

The commission set the early deer season along the coast from Aug. 8-Sept. 30 and in district 1¾ from Sept. 21-Oct. 13 as mandated by the legislature, and Sept. 19-Nov. 8 for all areas except Dist. 1¾.

All deer seasons will start on Saturdays and end on Sundays except in Northeastern California (1¾), where shooting will commence on Monday and end on Tuesday because the commission was powerless to change the 1963 dates. The legislation, sponsored by Assemblywoman Pauline Davis, D-Portola, also froze into law a district seasonal limit of one buck of at least three points. Limits in other areas were more liberal.

The bag limits were the same as in 1963—two bucks, fork-horn or better per year in the early season area; two bucks, fork-horn or better, per year in the northern counties not included in the early season or Dist. 1¾ and one buck, fork-horn or better, per year in the balance of the state.

The early archery deer season will be July 18-Aug. 2 and late season Aug. 29-Sept. 13.

Other bag limits and dates included:

Pheasants, limit—two per day, ten per season in Southern California; rest of the state, ten males per season with daily bag of two, Nov. 21-Dec. 6, except Imperial-Eastern Riverside area, Nov. 21-Dec. 20.

Quail, 10 daily, Oct. 31-Jan. 3, except in Northeastern California Oct. 31-Dec. 13.

Red-legged Partridges, 4 daily, Oct. 31-Jan. 3, except Northeastern California Oct. 31-Dec. 13. (Area in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, and San Diego counties closed to taking of Indian Chukars opened in 1964.)

Sage Grouse, 2 per season, Sept. 5-6 in Modoc, Mono and Inyo counties. No open season in rest of state.

Sierra and Ruffed Grouse, 2 per season. Sept. 5-6 in Northern California. Sept. 26-Oct. 4 in Central California. No season rest of state.

Tree Squirrels, 2 per day, Oct. 31-Jan. 3, except in Northeastern California Oct. 31-Dec. 13. San Luis Obispo County was added to those counties open.

Brush, Cottontail, Pigmy Rabbits and varying hare, 5 per day, Sept. 5-Jan. 3 in Southern California. North of Tehachapi Mountains, Santa Barbara and Northern Ventura counties Sept. 1-Jan. 3, Northeastern California Sept. 1-Dec. 13.

Bear, 2 per season. Sept. 19-Jan. 3.

ALONG MARIN'S SPORTS TRAIL

By JIM GILMARTIN

Anglers, Now You Can Call Fish; Ex-Wrestler Hero In Canal Fire

Certainly you've heard of a duck call. All my fine-feathered friends have.

But now they've come out with something new. At least to me. It's a fish call. Heck, I didn't even know the little devils had ears.

Anyway, today's mail bags bring a news release from Eastland Mail Order house, St. Clair Shores, Mich., telling about a multi-frequency transistorized fish call. You can just sit back on your rotund duff and call the fish to your exact fishing spot with this gimmick.

The Eastland people tell us ichthyologists have known for some time that fish respond to sonic oscillations (that's sound) between 50 and 300 cycles, and to light waves. Both have been combined in this compact unit.

The sound waves, though only moderately audible to the human ear, travel some 200 to 300 yards through the water and attract the fish directly to the source. I don't know what the call says. Probably somelike, "Here, Fishy, Fishy," or, 'Junior, Dinner's ready; I have a great big worm for you," or, "Why don't you come up and see me sometime, you great big handsome striped bass."

From then on, Eastland informs us, it is up to the "skill" of the fisherman to get the fish to bite. The manufacturers are quick to note that the TR-Sonic Fish Call does not give a fisherman unfair advantage of a fish any more than a duck call gives a poor shot any advantage.

They call it a Fish Call; I calls it Electronic Chummin'.

Next thing you know they'll come out with a barrel full of fish and a gun for the angler.

ONE OF the heroes in the cabin cruiser fire on the San Rafael Canal Sunday was Thomas Charles Rice of 19 Elm Avenue, Kentfield.

He "just happened to be swimming by," he told I-J photographer Jim Kean, and noticed the craft starting to top. So he grabbed the side and held it steady so the firemen could fight the blaze.

Old timers in these parts remember Rice as quite a football star at USF back in the late 1930s. He also spent several years as a professional grunt and groaner, part of the time as the good guy, other times as the villain.

Rice continues to keep in top physical condition with daily swims along the length of San Rafael Canal. That's how he "just happened to be swimming by" to lend a big hand in the cruiser fire.

AT LEAST one Marin Athletic League coach has threatened to withhold his team from next year's league tournament unless they move up the starting time.

Thursday's MAL tourney at Indian Valley in Novato was finished in the dark, per usual, because of the 4 p.m. starting time. Ever try golfing in the dark?

Come on, league, change your starting time for the golfers next year.

OFFICIAL NAME for the new Marin semi-pro baseball league is "Marin County Athletic League, Inc.," the same title under which the local high schools operate their interscholastic sports program, sans the Inc.

To avoid confusion, the I-J will refer to the semi-pros as the Marin Semi-Pro League.

MARIN COUNTIANS played an instrumental part in the fine 21-3 won-lost record posted by Lick-Wilmerding (S.F.) High School tennis team this year.

Glen Pritzker of Mill Valley was Lick's first singles man; Andy Wilson of Tiburon and Peter Youtz of San Rafael comprised the second doubles team and Brice Costello of San Rafael was a reserve.

Not to mention that George Hall of San Rafael coached the prep school team that trounced the Marin League champion Redwood Giants 5-0 and San Rafael 4-1.

MARIN COUNTY Coroner Frank Keaton told Price Hall he'd be willing to swap jobs with Alvin Dark. "And I'd bet Dark would do well in my job," Keaton dead-panned, stiffly.

A Boost For UOP Sports

STOCKTON (UPI)—University of Pacific football fans were jubilant today with the news that Teddie Darling was transferring from Purdue University to UOP.

"Darling will be a tremendous addition to our football program," said head coach Don Campora. "We watched Darling in high school and liked what we saw."

Campora predicted that Darling will meet no eligibility problem and will probably enjoy a greater reception at the college than did grid greats Eddie Lebaron and Dick Bass.

The aptly-named Darling is a well-assembled blue-eyed blonde who has been the "Golden Girl" of Purdue for the last year. The former Miss Stockton and Miss Perfect Posture of California is expected to handle the drum major chores for the school.

Champion Terra Linda '9' Clobbered By San Rafael

OUTSTANDING MARIN PREP ATHLETES

Big First Inning In 8-2 Upset

San Rafael High bats blasted the Marin Athletic League champion Terra Linda pitchers for seven runs in the first inning and the Bulldogs coasted to an 8-2 win to wind up the MAL season yesterday.

In the first inning for San Rafael, Ken Lampert started the slaughter with a seemingly innocuous base on balls. Ken Erdman singled, and Lampert went to third on a passed ball with Dan Bell up. Erdman stole second one pitch later, and then Bell lashed a single to score both runners.

Bell also stole second, and went to third as Rod Monti grounded out. Dan Ahern grounded out, and Bell ran home with the third Bulldog run. Rocky Shone kept the inning alive with a double, and when Bill Brody, Trojan hot corner guardian, made a throwing error on Wade Roberts' grounder, Shone came in to score.

ANOTHER ERROR

Mark Maas then singled Roberts to third, and Tim Witt, batting for pitcher Jim Schmidt, singled home Roberts. Lampert walked for the second time in the inning, and Erdman grounded to Brody, who again threw the ball away, allowing Witt to come home with the seventh San Rafael tally. Bell, perhaps tired of hitting, struck out to end the holocaust.

Jim Schmidt and Steve Jensen teamed up for a four-hitter against the champions.

BACK YARD WATER—This is one of the many homes and apartments on the San Rafael Canal which provide boating facilities from the back door. It makes it real easy for the boat owners who want to go for a "Sunday sail."

PROPWASH

By ELEANOR FREEMAN

Happy Is The Boat Owner With A Back Yard Filled With Water

Happy is the boater—with a back yard filled with water. He moors his craft beside his kitchen door. When the urge to cruise is upon him, he steps from his abode, tosses refreshments into his boat, and is on his way. Actually, it's Instant Boating.

Having his sport or hobby in conjunction with his home isn't new at all. In this case it should be a perfect choice. But careless property selection, predicated on this type of thinking has occurred many times.

FOR EXAMPLE, a prospective home buyer reads this classified ad, "2 bedrms. Large tennis court in back yard." This contains the guile understatement . . . a classic of brevity.

He looks. The house is middle-aged, has a youthful paint job, red awnings, rick-rack curtains. Also a herb garden, petunias—and dry rot in the front steps.

But he buys it. Why? He's a tennis "nut," that's why.

ANOTHER man, a young business executive, reads this one, "7 bedrooms, 1 bath; screen porch . . ." What the seller shows him is an old house with stolid bourgeois personality. And why does this species always crouch on a knoll of oaks, madrones and poison oak? He finds the basement damp. It has rheumatism of the joists. The place holds beaded lamp shades, crocheted "guess-whats," and beaded portiers. Furthermore there's a dusty stack of one-sided "78" phonograph records: Enrico Caruso, Galli-Curci, and Maurice Gunsky.

So, why does he sign on the dotted line? Because there's loads of land with it. And land to him means one thing. A golf course.

And who, in his right mind, would consider this: "Country Gentleman's Estate; quaint gargoyles, summer pavilion, tack room & stables . . ." The interior is done in morbid wainscoting, disgruntled rubber plants. The ½ bath is 1.8 kilometers from the bedroom —on the back porch. The merciful finality of an era.

But it's still a great buy. It has a maze of riding trails, and this buyer's family is crazy over horses.

"BUY YOUR home on the water . . ." "Rent an apartment on the canal," reads many an ad. "Swim . . ." "Fish . . ." What a privileged manner of living for the forunate ones, the ones who have found a spot on the inevitably dwindling Marin waterfront. And his dwelling will be a delight; not just the means to a hobby.

Think of it! No berthing fees. No trailer to wrestle and maintain. As to the tab on this, it's a trifle higher than a relatively constructed inland dwelling. It does, however, offer a full price range. All manner of waterfront abodes are along Sausalito's shoreline, San Clemente Slough, Gallinas Creek and Greenbrae Canal. And lately, beautiful apartments edge the San Rafael Canal, casting contemporary water shadows.

THESE apartments are not pea-in-the-podish. Some persons have long scornfully considered the ultra modern home as: The place one goes to from the garage when carrying groceries to the kitchen. They dislike the precise banker's personality of its stark decor; and they feel the awful dependency on the PG&E is pitiful to contemplate.

Behold., though, the design of over-water-properties. Built with reverence to the new concept and to the needs and moods of water-lovers. They are splendid, spaciously-windowed units, crafted to catch the sun, favor the view and avoid winds. Heated pools, decks, deep water docking—all of this, a healthful new way of viewing life.

Novato Gets Tie For Second Place

Charles Larsen, batting with the bases loaded in the last inning, waited out a walk to force teammate Chuck Overmyer home with the winning run, giving Novato High a 3-2 cliffhanger over Redwood in a Marin Athletic League baseball finale yesterday.

John Dolinsek, going the route for his second win of the season, hurled the Novatans into a tie with Drake for second place in the league standings.

The Hornets struck in the opening inning when Ron Rowell led off with a base on balls. Dolinsek singled him along, and Larsen brought him home with another single.

Redwood fought back in the second with two runs, putting three hits and error together for the scores. Giant pitcher Scott Murphy was the big bat in the Redwood cause, driving both runs in with his two-out single.

Novato tied it up in the fifth when Larsen, a real hero in the Hornet win, walked, stole second and came home on Tom Miller's safety.

In the seventh, Overmyer got a walk to start the inning, Rowell singled him to second and Dolinsek helped his own cause with another single to load the sacks. Larsen, patient as the Sphinx, then worked reliever Scott Davi for the free pass and the ball game.

Dodgers Sign Hurling Whiz

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Teenage pitching star Dennis Daboll of Las Vegas, Nev., was paid a "substantial bonus" to sign with the Los Angeles Dodgers, a club spokesman says.

Daboll, 17, was assigned Thursday to a Dodger farm club, the Santa Barbara Rancheros of the California League.

The 6-foot-3½ Daboll averaged 15 strikeouts per game at Western High School in Las Vegas. His earned run average was less than one a game when he led Western to a Southern Conference baseball title.

Big Soccer Game Set Wednesday

The Liverpool Reds, champions of the English Soccer League's first division, will play the San Francisco All-Star squad in a top-flight match in San Francisco's Kezar Stadium Wednesday at 8:15 p.m.

Twelve international stars are on the Liverpool roster—nine from England and three from Scotland.

Two members of the 1964 American Olympic Games soccer team will be in the San Francisco lineup — Gary De Long, goalkeeper, and Al Korbus, a forward.

Tam Clouts Marin Catholic

With a baseball score like 10-6, you'd expect each team to have used plenty of relief pitching, but not in the Marin Athletic League game yesterday between Tamalpais and Marin Catholic high schools.

The Tam Indians garnered the 10 tallies, and senior hurler Dick Daniels endured all sorts of indignities in his seven innings of pitching, but he was untouched compared to Dave Beswick, moundsman for the losers, who also went the distance.

Beswick was pounded for 11 hits, and had to watch as his teammates committed four errors. Dave didn't help himself much in one inning when he threw the ball away to load the bases. All in all, it was a horrible day for pitchers, but the hitters had a great time.

Each team committed five errors.

Scoring in the wild affair was capped by a four-run Tam outburst in the sixth inning to break up a 6-5 closie. A lead-off single by Ron Rhoades, successive bunt singles by freshman Steve Woodward and Larry Gray, a squeeze bunt by John Hammond and a three-run homer by Rick Miller put the icing on Tam's victory, although it couldn't improve the Indians' last place finish in league standings.

VOTERS IN TAMALPAIS UNION HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT

Due to numerous questions received, a clarification seems indicated in the unification election:

A. School law does not allow for mailing sample ballots.

B. Voters throughout the district are eligible to vote for one candidate in each of seven trustee areas.

C. State Law requires printing of arguments for and against the proposal, and a copy of the Committee's recommendation. Signatures of Virgil S. Hollis, secretary, and Earl Marshall, chairman, merely verify the statement of the committee, and do not indicate either approval or disapproval.

D. On June 2 your ballot for election of trustees for the proposed unified district will look like the sample ballot below.

Marin Youths Win Entrance To Academies

Rep. Don H. Clausen (R-Crescent City) today announced the appointment of three young men from Marin to attend United States service academies this year.

Richard T. Ahern, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ira R. Ahern of 154 Glen Park, San Rafael, will leave June 30 for the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Daniel B. Ahern, (no relation), son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard L. Ahern of 455 Calle de la Mesa, Novato, will leave June 29 for the U.S. Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs.

Douglas A. MacPherson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alan K. MacPherson of 17 Bret Avenue, San Rafael, will head for the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N.Y., sometime in August.

Congressman Clausen appointed three others from Sonoma County and one from Mendocino County.

The 12-man screening committee, appointed by Clausen, included Capt. Weaver Meadows of San Anselmo and former Naval Academy football coach Eddie Erdelatz of San Rafael.

The appointments resulted from competition and screening of 85 young men who had applied to the Congressman for appointment to a service academy.

Memorial Message

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Gov. Edmund G. Brown has asked Californians to strive for "freedom, justice and equality for all Americans" in his Memorial Day message. He said America's war heroes died for those goals, and urged the state's citizens "to reverently rededicate themselves to the great truths and to the great ideals for which these men fought."

Mill Valley's Mayor Backs Library Bonds

Mill Valley Mayor Michael Wornum today made an appeal for passage of the $325,000 bond issue for a new library to be voted on Tuesday.

Wornum urged that debate over location of the proposed library not be a prime influence in the voters' decision on the bonds.

"Recent experience in many cities across the United States has shown that many vital facilities needed by the community are delayed indefinitely, not because the need is not recognized, but because a consensus cannot be arrived at as to where they are to be located."

The Old Mill Park site for the new library was recommended after many public hearings. The planning commission, park and recreation commission, library board and city council all unanimously endorsed the recommendation, he said.

The bonds should be supported by all "for the greater good of the community," he said.

U.S. SENATOR

Northern California needs a U.S. Senator, too. (Senator Kuchel, whose term does not expire for two and one-half years, is from Southern California.) Republicans should bear in mind that the probable winner of the Democratic nomination is from Northern California and would be likely to make this point against any Southern Republican in the General Election in November.

FACTS ON THE TAMALPAIS,
AN OUTSTANDING RESIDENCE FOR RETIRED PERSONS,
PROPOSED FOR GREENBRAE IN LARKSPUR,
A PRESTIGE LOCATION

A fireproof building, especially designed to give its residents the utmost in safety, convenience and enjoyment of suburban living, with roof garden, an elegant dining room, auditorium and many delightful activity areas.

There are only a few units on the otherwise fully-landscaped roof garden comprising the top floor. Unobstructed view of Mt. Tamalpais and the Bay is assured from practically all units.

The main building covers only approximately 15% of a six-acre plot, the balance of the site being reserved for landscaping and outdoor recreation facilities. Located on a hilltop, the natural growth of oaks and other native trees is preserved on the slopes. It lies within approximately the middle of a 125-acre multi-family zoned area, less than 1000 feet east of the Marin General Hospital.

It promises to be the finest project in Marin for many years to come. It is unsurpassed in location, site, architecture, exposure and view. The site is within 300 feet of Corte Madera Creek, a navigable stream.

The Tamalpais is intended to assist in filling the pressing need for apartments for the elderly, which has been the concern of several County committees. Residents will be restricted to persons over 60 years old.

Property tax revenue is estimated at approximately $110,000 per year, of which approximately $70,000 would go to the support of schools, $14,000 to the City of Larkspur, and the balance to the County and other districts, in addition to sales and other taxes. There would, of course, be no load on the schools whatsoever and a minimum demand on other services.

The project is to be privately financed and is sponsored by Valley Investment Co., a Marin County partnership headed by John Siemens, M.D., Administrator and part owner of Ross General and Novato General Hospitals.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Muscle Injury Can Result In Formation Of Unwanted New Bones

VAN DELLEN

A few weeks ago I saw an X-ray of the upper leg of a professional football player. An elongated shadow in the thigh looked like an extra piece of bone. It was. This man had traumatic myositis ossificans, a condition in which muscle turns to bone.

This is the end result of a bruise in which there is a hemorrhage into a muscle (charley horse). The torn muscle is believed to liberate a substance that forms bone. In this respect, the defect represents an abnormal healing process, with the formation of bone instead of fibrous scar tissue.

THIS TYPE of the malady is confined usually to a small group of muscles in the arms or legs. Tendons or a muscle adjacent to a fracture are affected occasionally.

According to Dr. Reed S. Clegg of Salt Lake City, prompt care of a charley horse is the best preventive of myositis ossificans. Bleeding can be minimized by applying ice and a pressure bandage and by elevating the extremities. Enzymes help reduce swelling. It may be necessary to remove the blood tumor if it is massive.

A DIFFERENT approach is needed should myositis ossificans develop. The bone in the muscle can be removed by surgery or an attempt can be made to encourage it to absorb or disintegrate. This is done through rest and restriction of physical activity until pain subsides. Elastic bandages, slings, or crutches may be used to prevent movement of the leg. Warm whirlpool baths are helpful. In time, active exercises are started to restore muscle tone.

Myositis ossificans progressiva is another form of this disorder. The cause is thought to be inability of the cells to reproduce cells of the same type. As a result, the muscles and fasciae develop a bony consistency. Muscle stiffness usually begins in the neck or back and spreads elsewhere.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

RECURRING DANDRUFF

G. S. writes: Can a person who has had dandruff most of his adult life ever get rid of it? I've tried all the usual remedies, but when I stop using them the condition returns.

REPLY

This is a problem. Many of the newer remedies do an excellent job, but dandruff may return when the shampoo is stopped. On the other hand, the causes of scaling vary and you should consult a dermatologist for an expert opinion. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on care of the hair and scalp.

NO PREVENTIVE

J. B. writes: If a man takes Vitamin K before his wife conceives, is the child less likely to be mentally retarded?

REPLY

No. To my knowledge, there are no drugs, vitamins, or minerals the father can use that will have this effect upon the child.

NERVES AND INTESTINE

R. W. G. writes: Are any special foods good for nervousness?

REPLY

Only when nervousness affects the gastrointestinal tract. Bland foods are helpful but the emotional origin must be corrected to obtain complete relief.

CANCER OF BONE

L. C. writes: How is bone cancer treated today?

REPLY

Bone cancers usually are removed, treated with X-ray, or both.

ONE AND THE SAME

Mrs. W. writes: Is there any difference between three-day measles and German measles?

REPLY

No. German measles (rubella) lasts three days.

Marin Artists Win Places In East Bay Show

Eight Marinites, one a top prize-winner, are represented in the Walnut Creek Ninth Art Annual, which opened today in the Contra Costa County city and will run through next Saturday.

Other Marin residents in the show at the Broadway Parking Mall in downtown Walnut Creek are Dennis Beall, John Ihle, Laura Devendorf, Ada Garfinkel, Bette Klopf, Sylvia Ludins and Doris Morrison.

Prize-winning works will be on exhibit for the month of June in the Walnut Creek Library after the Broadway show closes, according to Ronald F. Caya, director of civic arts.

Obscene Calls Wake Residents Of Mill Valley

Nine persons, eight from Mill Valley and one from Muir Beach, reported to Mill Valley police yesterday that they were awakened between 2 and 4:30 a.m. with obscene telephone calls.

In most cases the person calling identified himself as "Sergeant Schriver of the Mill Valley Police Department."

There is no such sergeant in the department, said Chief Dan Terzich today. He said anyone making such calls will be arrested if found.

The penal code states that a person making a telephone call with the intent to annoy another and without disclosing true identity is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Today is Saturday, May 30, the 151st day of 1964 with 215 to follow. Today is Memorial Day.

The moon is approaching its last quarter. The morning star is Saturn. The evening star is Venus.

On this day in history:

In 1883, an unfounded report that the Brooklyn Bridge was about to collapse resulted in an outbreak of panic and 12 persons were trampled to death.

In 1942, Britain's Royal Air Force made its first 1,000 bomber" raid on a German target at 1,100 planes attacked Cologne.

A thought for the day — Third U. S. President Thomas Jefferson said: "Republican is the only form of government which is not eternally at open or secret war with the rights of mankind."

'Archaic' Bridge System Provides Some Enjoyment For Pair In Game

A week from Sunday is the Election Party of the Marin Unit of the ACBL. The agenda: place, Jewish Community Center, San Rafael; time, 1:15 p.m. Election Party game; 4:30 p.m. champagne cocktail hour; 5 p.m. buffet dinner; 6 p.m. election results; 6:30 p.m. meet your new committee.

All of this is free if you are a member of the Marin Unit of the American Contract Bridge League. As Bill Wallace of Novato told me last week, "I have never received more for $2 than I did this past year when I first joined the Marin Unit.

CASTRO

Today I am going to tell you the story of a new duplicate bridge player, the same Bill Wallace of Novato. Bill asked me what he should do to learn to play duplicate and I replied, "Bill, read and study the first three chapters in Goren's book until you can answer the questions in the back without one error." Bill studies those three chapters. He also took lessons and he has played once a week for 10 months and when we sat down to play last Thursday he said, "Are we going to play just like those first three chapters in Goren's book?" Yes, sir! I replied. "Do you mean if you open one heart and the next hand bids one spade I cannot bid two hearts with nine or 10 points and good heart support?" Yes, sir! "If you bid one diamond, I can't bid one heart with four to the nine spot and seven points but have to bid one no trump?" Yes, sir! "But Joe, I've played for 10 months now and no one around here plays like that!" Yes, sir, but we are; aren't we? "Yes, sir."

And so, with fear in his heart we sat down to play an archaic system known as Goren. Here is one swing hand from the Novato tournament, directed by Lura Crossley. Mrs. Sunny Morrow of Novato and young Bob Crossley bid the hand perfectly to six diamonds.

NORTH
♠ Q 2
♥ Q J 7 6
♦ A 10 6
♣ A K J 4

WEST	EAST
♠ 10 7 5 4 3	♠ A K J 9 6
♥ 5 3	♥ 10 9 8 2
♦ 3	♦ Q 7 4
♣ 10 7 6 3 2	♣ 5

SOUTH
♠ 2
♥ A K 4
♦ K J 9 8 5 2
♣ Q 9 8

N	E	S	W
1NT	P	3♦	P
4♣	P	4♥	P
5♦	P	6♦	All Pass

When the score was posted Bill and I had won East-West with a 70 per cent game and now it was my turn to ask questions. "Did you enjoy knowing your partner had nine or 10 points and good heart support every time he gave you a free raise?" Yes, sir. "Did you enjoy knowing I had a biddable suit every time I bid up the ladder?" Yes, sir. "Did you really enjoy playing this archaic system?" Yes, sir.

"But, Joe, when we played that hand above the bidding went like this: N-1♣, I overcalled 1♠, south 2♦ and you bid 3♠, which was doubled and I made three for a top our way. Now doesn't Goren say that to double raise an overcall you must have the equivalent of an opening hand?"

Hmmmm, that's sneaky Goren and I'll tell you about that after you have finished Goren's book.

WARMING UP FOR WAR?

India Fears Red China Road Building

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP)—This capital is haunted by the sound of Communist Chinese picks and shovels clinking and clanking on the rocky Himalayan terrain of the Tibetan-Indian frontier.

Chinese roadbuilders, working night and day, have made astonishing progress in pushing through desolate southern Tibet and up to the Indian border.

Indian intelligence experts say rapid movement of troops and supplies by truck convoys now is possible much of the year east and west through Tibet and south to India.

The Indians fear the Chinese intend to expand their road network until attacks could be launched on the Indian border from a dozen jumpoff spots. Existing or proposed roads pose threats on India's right and left flanks.

The minority view in the Indian government seems to be that all this Chinese activity is aimed only at consolidating Peking's hold on Tibet by importing Chinese settlers and troops to combat rebel Tibetans.

However, some of India's higher officials have said publicly that the Chinese are warming up for more trouble on the scale of 1962, when a bloody frontier war broke out in three sectors.

Finance Minister T. T. Krishnamachari told a press conference 1966 will be a dangerous year for India because the Chinese by that time will have their logistic problems straightened out.

In 1962, the Chinese offensives broke through India's defenses and Red troops literally ran down the Himalayas into Indian's territory. Then the Chinese stopped and pulled back.

One of India's top soldiers told a newsman he thinks the Chinese stopped because their roads and supply dumps in Tibet could not support further advances.

Roads now being built and a proposed Lhasa-to-China railroad would go a long way toward solving the supply problem.

The primary Chinese supply road runs south out of Sinkiang province through Aksai Chin in India's Ladakh region, then turns southeast and skirts the Himalayas until it reaches Lhasa.

The 1962 Chinese attack in Ladakh was believed aimed primarily at protecting this road by gaining and holding ground well south of it.

Indian officials say the road is graveled and heavily traveled by trucks. It is impossible to tell, however, whether the Chinese have licked the problem of keeping the road open in mountain passes during the bitter Tibetan winter.

The most disquieting recent development, officials say, is Chinese construction of "feeder roads" south from this main east-west road to outposts on the Indian border.

There are 26 established Chinese outposts on the border—16 on the Northeast Frontier Agency border, seven in Ladakh, and three in the central sector.

In Indian eyes, each outpost and connecting feeder road poses a potential threat and must be covered by large numbers of Indian troops.

This covering effort alone stretches the Indian Army across thousands of miles of rugged frontier, from the Walong area of Assam state in the east to Ladakh in the west.

Additionally, the Chinese are known to have built a "back up" supply route deeper in Tibet to parallel the main east-west Sinkiang-to-Lhasa road. Little information is available in New Delhi on this route.

Indian officials say one of China's most dangerous roads is the one that was blasted through the mountains from the Tibetan border to Katmandu, capital of Nepal.

The Indian Army long has considered routes of approach leading south from Nepal, and its neighbors of Sikkim and Bhutan, to be a primary source of concern.

The Chinese also have agreed to build a portion of a proposed east-west road within Nepal. The Soviet Union has expressed interest in constructing a sector of the same road farther west.

This road's proximity to the Indian border gives it obvious — and to India, dangerous — military value.

Thinking years ahead, some Indian officials see the threat of flanking movements by Chinese roadbuilders—and possibly troops—through neighboring Pakistan and Burma.

Pakistan is building a road from Gilgit in the north to its capital, Rawalpindi. It will link with other roads and railways running south to the Arabian Sea.

In view of Pakistan's increasing friendliness with Communist China, some Indian officials say the Chinese are bound to attempt a linkup between their Sinkiang roads and Pakistan's Gilgit-to-Rawalpindi route.

Some officials hold the view that Gen. Ne Win's regime has all but pulled out of many sections of northern Burma under pressure from "White Flag" Communists and rebellious Karen and Kachin tribesmen.

This road, built through northern Burma by U.S. and Nationalist Chinese forces in World War II, links China's Yunnan province with northeastern India. Whether Communist Chinese forces could move along it today is anybody's guess.

Mysterious Soviet Feb. 12 Letter Ends In Bitter Red China Exchange

By G. A. BARKER

On Feb. 12, 1964, the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union sent a letter to the other Communist parties, excluding China and presumably Albania and other defectors from the Soviet Camp.

Presumably it was about a forthcoming meeting of the World's Communist Parties to excommunicate the Chinese. The Chinese probably know full well its contents, since the Communist movement the world over has its share of Chinese sympathizers, but Peking chose to make it an issue in the recent exchange of letters with with Moscow.

On Feb. 26 Peking wrote, "We have learned from a number of quarters that the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union recently sent to fraternal parties a letter which is directed against the Communist Party of China. This letter distorts the facts of the current public polemics in the international Communist movement, manufactures lies slandering the Chinese Communist Party and instigates a so-called 'struggle against the great-power and Trotskyite views and the factional and disruptive activities of the Chinese leaders." After some vituperatiton of their own, the Chinese demand that the Soviets send them a copy of the letter.

On Feb. 22 the Soviets replied with a strong note in which they gave a stern rebuke to the Chinese. "Your great power habits also appear in your last letter when addressing the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, you demand that it send to you its letter of Feb. 12. You do not request, but demand.

"One asks by what right? Can it really be that you consider that anyone will take your tone seriously, become frightened and rush as fast as his legs can carry him to fulfill your every demand? This is not merely rude but simply ridiculous. Your letter and its deliberately rude tone compels us to reflect once again: with what purpose was it sent?" Etc. . . .

On Feb. 27 the Chinese banged one back in which they accuse the Soviets of unscrupulously engaging in sectarian, factional and divisive activities and adopting "vicious two-faced tactics," and having the "inveterate habit of great-power chauvinism and posing as the 'Father Party.'"

They go on for some length and close with this paragraph: "You accuse us of committing a blunder by 'demanding' instead of 'requesting' that you send us a copy of your letter of Feb. 12. In Chinese usage the two words do not imply as big a difference as you describe. But since you take it so seriously and even make it an excuse for refusing to give us the letter of Feb. 12, which is directed against the Communist Party of China, well then, we are now complying with your wish and request that you send us a copy of the letter which you gave the other fraternal parties on Feb. 12. It is our earnest hope that you will do so."

On March 7 the Soviets replied in a lengthy letter saying that preparatory meetings of the 26 Parties should be held in June or July leading to a big international meeting this fall to settle the ideological dispute.

Moscow went on to say, "It is quite understandable that there was no sense at all in sending you our letter addressed to other fraternal parties . . . We hold a much higher opinion of the Chinese language. The Chinese are a great people with an ancient culture and understand perfectly well the shades of meaning between 'request' and 'demand.' It may even happen that the words are the same but the music is quite different. Incidentally, the word 'request' was found in the Chinese language, after all, when there was a desire to use it. We hope that from now on the language of ultimatums will be excluded forever from our relations."

On May 7 the Chinese bitterly rejected Moscow's suggestion of meetings to settle the ideological disputes and said it was regrettable that "you have groundlessly refused to give us a copy of your letter of Feb. 12 . . . If you go on refusing, our request will stand for 10,000 years."

Thus we are left to wonder what was in that mysterious letter. Whatever it was it must have been a dandy.

GOP GAINS ON DEMOS

State Voter Registration Is Up Over 1962 Primary

By MORRIE LANDSBERG

SACRAMENTO (AP) — More people will be entitled to vote Tuesday than for any primary in California history.

Registration figures released by Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan placed the total at 7,122,724, just barely topping the figure for the 1962 primary by 71.

Democrats, 4,022,302, or 56.47 per cent of the total.

Republicans, 2,895,448, or 40.65 per cent.

Another 179,560 voters declined to state any party affiliation, and 25,414 were listed as miscellaneous, including 14,963 nonpartisan, 4,856 independent, and 3,266 Prohibition.

Not Many Congress Tests

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The story of more than half the nominations for Congress in California's primary election Tuesday can be told in two words: No contest.

Forty of the 76 nominations already will be settled when the polls open because the candidates have no opponents.

California has 38 seats in Congress and a present lineup of 23 Democrats and 15 Republicans. Two of the Republicans won in special elections in previously Democratic districts after the 1962 election.

All of the Republican incumbents and all but two of the Democrats seek re-election.

Only three of the GOP incumbents have primary opposition. Sixteen of the 21 Democrats seeking re-election are unopposed in their party's primary.

The most spirited contests are in the two districts without incumbents and in a district Democrats hoped to recapture from Republican Rep. Del Clawson of Compton, a special election victor last year.

Seven Democrats are battling for the right to challenge Clawson in a district that is more than 60 per cent Democratic in registration, the 23rd.

Other wide-open contests are in the 27th District, where Rep. Everett G. Burkhalter (D-Los Angeles) is retiring at 69 after one term; and the 33rd where veteran Harry R. Sheppard, 79-year-old Yucaipa Democrat, is stepping down after 14 terms in the House of Representatives.

Five Democrats, including State Assemblyman Tom Bane of North Hollywood, seek the nomination in the 27th; while six Democrats and four Republicans campaign in the 33rd.

Incumbent Rep. Ronald Brooks Cameron of Whittier is unopposed for the 25th District Democratic nomination, but four Republicans campaigned for the GOP nomination.

In a total of 13 districts, neither party has a contest for the nomination.

And two Democratic incumbents—Phillip Burton in the 5th District and John J. McFall in the 15th—were assured reelection because there are no Republican candidates.

A total of 133 candidates are in the field for the 38 Democratic and 38 Republican nominations.

California Is Key State In Presidential Primary

SACRAMENTO (AP)—An upset in Oregon combined with high stakes to boost the importance of California's election Tuesday—the last presidential primary before the national conventions.

The election offered the first head-on clash of two major candidates in California since 1956 and one of the few in recent years without a favorite son candidate.

Attention focused on the GOP presidential contest between moderate Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York, upset winner in Oregon last month, and Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the conservative spokesman.

The winner will pick up 86 delegates pledged to vote for him at the Republican National Convention at San Francisco's Cow Palace July 13.

On the Democratic side, voters had a choice between rival delegations which were uninstructed but informally committed to President Lyndon B. Johnson. One delegation was headed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, the other by Mayor Samuel Yorty of Los Angeles.

At stake were 154 votes at the Democratic convention at Atlantic City Aug. 25.

The most recent contest between two major candidates was in 1956, when Adlai Stevenson defeated the late Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee in the Democratic primary in California.

In 1960, Brown's "favorite son" slate defeated one headed by pension advocate George McLain in the Democratic primary, while former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was unopposed on the GOP ballot.

Brown's delegates subsequently split—with California votes going to every major candidate at the convention. He declined to make this year's slate a "favorite son" group pledged to him after that experience.

The Democratic governor, then attorney general, entered a hastily organized favorite son slate in 1952, but was beaten by a Kefauver delegation.

PRIMARY SIMPLE FOR LEGISLATORS

50 Assemblymen And 14 State Senators Unopposed For Their Party Nomination

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Sixty-four legislators are able to sit back and watch the other guy campaign for Tuesday's primary.

There are 50 assemblymen and 14 state senators unopposed for their party's nomination.

The outlook was even brighter for four of these lawmakers. Nobody else — Democrat or Republican — entered the race, practically guaranteeing victory in the November general election.

But there are still plenty of lively scraps with 257 people running for the Assembly and 56 for the Senate.

Attention also focused on many GOP primaries because of charges by some Republicans that ultra-conservatives were using the races to seize control of the party.

This year, all 80 Assembly seats are up for election along with 20 of the 40 Senate seats. Senators have four-year terms with half elected every two years.

A victory in the primary earns the winner a chance to start campaigning all over again, fighting it out in November to change the political complexion of the Senate, now 27-12 Democratic, and the Assembly, controlled by Democrats, 50-28. There are vacancies in both houses.

A death and departures have emptied seats—and heightened interest—in five districts.

In the populous heart of San Francisco, Democrat Phillip Burton abandoned his Assembly seat and went to Congress.

Paul Lunardi (D-Roseville) quit the lower house and was elected to the State Senate. Sen. John Murdy (R-Santa Ana) announced his retirement.

The death of Sen. Lee Backstrand (R - Riverside,) who had been unopposed in the primary, complicated the Riverside County political situation.

The Republican Party's dispute over the legislative primaries has been fought quietly. Some Republicans have said the party's conservative wing was systematically running candidates in most all Assembly districts — even those so predominantly Democratic that a Republican doesn't have a chance. Losing candidates would then outnumber incumbent legislators and would be able to appoint a majority of the Republican State Central Committee.

Nehru Death Rocks Asia

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India died, leaving his country bereft of his strong guiding hand and creating a potential leadership vacuum in the critical tinderbox of Asia.

Nehru, maker of modern India and the recognized spokesman of "non-aligment," died Wednesday of coronary thrombosis. He was 74.

A million and a half of his countrymen lined the streets of New Delhi to pay last respects to their beloved leader. He had been prime minister since India gained independence nearly 17 years ago.

Such was the crush of mourners that four persons died in stampede that broke out along the route of the funeral procession. He was cremated on a pyre of sandalwood to the accompaniment of three rifle volleys and the crowd's shouts of "let Nehru be immortal."

Representatives of the nations of the world attended the ceremony. As the mourning Indians worried about the future of their troubled land, the foreigners looked ahead to changes on the international scene because of Nehru's death.

It was thought probable that the free world might find more trouble in attempting to control the Southeast Asia situation now without the dominating and respected figure of Nehru to serve as a moderating influence. Red China was expected to try for new power.

U.S. officials—including Secretary of State Dean Rusk—planned to meet Monday in Honolulu to discuss the diplomatic and military aspects of the growing crisis at President Johnson's request.

Meanwhile, the United States tried to avoid a full 14-nation reconvening of the Geneva Conference on the crisis.

Additional U.S. aircraft were sent to embattled Laos, where other U.S. planes were reported to have photographed infiltrating Communist troops from North Vietnam.

In the U.N., Afro-Asian nations drew up a proposal deploring alleged U.S. aggression against Cambodia growing from U.S. assistance to South Vietnamese forces.

In Washington, the Army admitted that structural failures in U.S. helicopters assigned to aid the anti-Communist forces in South Vietnam were responsible for the deaths of eight Americans.

Only 2 Still Answer The Camp's Roll Call

Marin Unit Of Spanish War Veterans Once Numbered 150 On Its Roster

By DON KEOWN

Back in 1905, the John H. Harris Camp No. 18 of the United Spanish War Veterans boasted 150 members.

This Memorial Day the roster of the Marin unit is down to two—Edward L. Keber and Maj. Robert Martin, both of San Rafael.

Keber is the camp commander.

"I guess I'm the adjutant, to," he smiles, "and everything else we have in the way of officers."

The Spanish-American War of six and a half decades ago is now a forgotten war, according to the spry and alert 84-year-old Keber. "When you mention it, lots of people don't even know what you are talking about."

BUT IT WAS an important war for Uncle Sam. The quick work he made of the Spaniards in the Caribbean and the Philippines established the United States, for the first time, as one of the world's foremost military powers.

The two men who remain as members of the Marin camp of the United Spanish War Veterans are not Marin's only survivors of that conflict. But the total number is down now to little more than a handful. Marin County Veterans Service Officer James Burdick says that his agency has on record 15 surviving Marinites who served Uncle Sam in the war. Since the office lists only those ex-servicemen for whom it has performed various services, there are probably others. But Burdick believes his files cover most of them. Included is one surviving woman veteran — Annie F. Paige.

Keber says that some of the Spanish-American War Veterans not belonging to the John H. Harris Camp no doubt are affiliated with other USWV units outside of Marin.

KEBER, himself, began his membership in the organization more than 20 years ago in Illinois. A former insurance claims manager and once an arbitrator for the Illinois Industrial Commission, he retired in 1945. He and his wife, Mary, came West to California's milder climate, living first in Pasadena and then moving to Marin six or seven years ago.

One daughter, Louise Robello, also resides in Marin. A second daughter lives in Walnut Creek.

Upon coming to Marin, Keber became a member of the Harris Camp. Now as commander, he has custody of the Marin unit's charter, flags and records.

At the time he came to San Rafael, the local United Spanish War Veterans group was still conducting meetings in the San Rafael Odd Fellows Hall. But with its dwindling membership, the camp could no longer afford to pay the rent for those accommodations, and in 1962 "with sadness in our hearts" Keber announced that the unit would have to give up its use of the hall and its meetings.

A WOMEN'S auxiliary of the John H. Harris Camp has since disbanded. But Keber, Martin and John McGrath of Bolinas had kept in official existence the camp itself. McGrath died in February.

Contacts now are through correspondence only.

Major Martin, now in failing health, saw service both in Cuba and the Philippines during the Spanish-American War, and also served in the Boxer Rebellion, the Mexican border conflict and World War I during his many years in the Army. Enlisting as a private, he rose to the rank of major.

"I write letters about business of the organization," Keber says. "For instance, I needed their approval to purchase flowers to be placed on the graves of deceased Spanish-American War veterans on Memorial Day."

Keber will be performing that annual duty today.

KEBER SAYS that he remembers well the conditions in the closing years of the 19th century that brought on the war with Spain. Sporadic fighting in Cuba, then under the Spanish yoke, made headlines in American newspapers from time to time. Then in 1895 a full-scale insurrection broke out.

"At the time Spain had in Cuba an army of 120,000 cavalry, infantry and artillery, a sufficient number to quell any uprising," Keber says. "But the soldiers had not been trained in guerilla-type warfare and they made a poor showing against the Cubans."

The Spanish commander, Gen. Valeriano Weyler, became infuriated in his frustration. He herded masses of Cubans into unsanitary concentration camps where they died by the hundreds of disease and malnutrition.

"AMERICAN newspapers called Weyler 'the butcher' and the title was well-deserved," Keber says.

While Americans were angered by Weyler's atrocities and by the loss of Uncle Sam's invested capital in Cuba, they were reluctant to become involved in war.

"But it was in the cards, and there was nothing we could do to halt the inevitable," Keber says.

He remembers that late in the afternoon of Feb. 15, 1898, "I was pounding away at my typewriter in Cincinnati when a man brought in a special edition of the Cincinnati Times Star. Covering the entire top half of the front page in six-inch letters was the nightmarish headline — BATTLE SHIP MAINE SUNK."

WAR FOLLOWED in April. In an astonishingly short time, the Spanish were routed. The Americans suffered heavy army casualties, but one by one the enemy units surrendered. The U.S. navy scored phenomenal victories shattering the Spanish fleet with virtually no casualties.

And names such as Dewey, Miles, Roosevelt, Funston, Merritt, Wood, Shafter and Schley were written into the pages of American history books.

As the nephew of three Civil War veterans (Keber himself saw both Gen. William T. Sherman and Phil Sheridan as a boy) and the younger brother of a cavalryman who had fought the Indians and died in service in 1893, it was not surprising that Edward Keber wound up in an army uniform. The conflict ended before he could be sent overseas.

HE REMEMBERS well the letter he received from Sgt. Patrick Leonard, a buddy of Keber's older brother, George, who had died five years previously. Leonard provided a vivid description of the spectacular charge of Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders and of the terrible price paid in lives by the supporting infantry for that victory. The next day, Sergeant Leonard was killed.

Keber says that United Spanish War Veterans meetings were usually devoted to the transaction of business involving matters of interest to the ex-servicemen, the remembrance of dead comrades, the encouragement of patriotism, and to social affairs.

Like most ex-soldiers, the Spanish-American War Veterans seldom talked of wartime experiences.

Keber does, however, recall a favorite story of the late

THIS IS NOT his Spanish-American War army uniform in which young Edward L. Keber is picture above. He was at the time—1896—a high school cadet in Cincinnati, Ohio. Two years later, still a teen-ager, he was wearing the uniform of an American soldier. His military stint, he says, was "uneventful." But he has vivid recollections of a period in U.S. history that has been almost forgotten, but which established Uncle Sam as a world power to be reckoned with.

The Forgotten War—

It Established Uncle Sam As A Leading World Power

Harry Whittaker of the John H. Harris Camp.

WHITTAKER WHO was a regimental bugler, liked to tell this one on himself. One day the colonel decided to have a dress parade with all staff officers mounted. Unfortunately, there weren't enough horses to go around, and Whittaker, as lowest in rank, was required to select a mule as his steed. The mule appeared docile enough until the troops were assembled and the colonel signaled for the bugler to sound attention. At the first note from the bugle, the terrified mule took off.

"And the mule ran six miles before I could get him to stop," Whittaker would laugh.

Keber's own favorite story dealt with the time he spent in training at Fort Stevens, Ore. A new contingent of 60 recruits arrived. To provide them with accommodations, the 34th Company was instructed to vacate one of its squad rooms. Unaware of the shift was the company's pet bear. And he remembered that, on the previous night, he had been treated to some cookies given him by one of the soldiers from his locker in that squad room.

SO THAT night, the bruin came calling, hopeful of receiving another handout of goodies. The new recruits were all asleep. But Bruno the bear knew which cot was assigned to his benefactor of the previous night, and it was for that bunk that he headed. He was peering down at the man, puzzled by the absence of his friend, when the recruit awoke. The man let out a shriek and rushed from the squad room. The other recruits were awakened by the noise, and huddled at one end of the room, shouting for help.

Either frightened by the noise or hurt by the lack of hospitality, the usually docile pet bear began to take out his irritation on the bedding, ripping mattresses and throwing them to the floor.

Downstairs a trumpeter heard the confusion, thought he understood the shouts of the terrified recruits and sounded the fire call on his bugle.

The entire fire-fighting apparatus and personnel of the fort responded, Keber laughs, only to find that all the calamity had been caused by a bear in search of cookies.

But the grimmer, bloodier aspects of the war of 1898 were seldom mentioned.

Not discussed, for instance, was such savage fighting as that which occurred in the first three days of July when, with 15,000 men engaged in battle, the Americans suffered 1,500 casualties in dead and wounded, or almost 6 per cent of their entire regular army.

"PERHAPS IT is the very fact that the men who fought in such engagements were reluctant to talk about them afterwards that has led many to think of the war with Spain as a phony war or a minor skirmish," Keber says.

But for the men who charged up San Juan Hill or braved disease and bullets in Philippine jungles or sailed with Dewey, it was a real and a deadly war.

And it will be in honor of these men that Edward L. Keber will be placing floral tributes today on graves of veterans, some long dead, some only recently deceased.

AS COORDINATOR of child welfare and attendance for the Tamalpais School District, the modern-version of the old-time "hooky cop," John R. George spends much of his time on the telephone in his office. He may be talking to the parents of a truant child, or to one of the high school deans, or to a welfare agency. Or he may be trying to line up a job for a student in need of work. (Photos by Tim Ingham)

JOHN GEORGE points to the location of the Tamalpais Union High School District offices at Redwood High School on a wall map of Marin County. His work centers from there. But he must spend a great deal of his time outside his office, traveling the district as he performs his duties.

The New 'Hooky Cop'

By JEANNE DE WILDE

The "hooky cop" with the shiny badge and crafty eyes of the "Our Gang" comedy movies was always chasing school kids who found spring fishing more alluring than the classroom.

Today's "hooky cop" for the Tamalpais High School District, John R. George, does not wear a shiny badge. Nor does he usually chase students back to school.

In the Tam District, the truant officer now bears the title of "coordinator of child welfare and attendance" and is a part of the comprehensive pupil personnel services program. Basically, the entire pupil personnel system tries to facilitate learning by alleviating students' problems as much as possible.

IN SOME respects, George's job still means being a "hooky cop." He is responsible for checking on all students who are truant or have irregular attendance records. Students are called to his attention by the assistant principals and the deans of girls at Tamalpais, Drake and Redwood high schools.

But most of the time George is a "traveling counselor," as he dubs himself. Helping pupils with emotional and social adjustment problems is only one of his counseling roles. His work also often involves counseling parents of children with emotional problems.

Irregular attendance or truancy is usually only the superficial problem in most of George's cases.

"TEACHERS, counselors, school psychologists, deans and principals all get in on the problems together," George explained.

"For example," said George, "the school psychologist and I might work together with a student trying to help him, or a counselor or teacher could recommend that I see a certain student. Teamwork with others in the pupil personnel system is essential in achieving any success in helping students."

When a child is neglected by his parents or is economically-deprived, George will visit the home and talk to both parents and student.

"Poor family relationships usually are the underlying causes beneath truancy," he stated. "Sometimes the mother and father may have no control over their son or daughter. They just can't get them out of bed in the morning or others don't care if they go to school in the morning at all."

"I MAY have to spend days persuading a student that school is important and that he must return," he added.

When the school cannot reach parents of truant children by telephone, it is up to George to track them down and find the children. This may involve interviewing neighbors to find where the family might have moved or seeing friends of the student.

ON THE ROAD in his Volkswagen, Tam's child welfare and attendance coordinator, John R. George, becomes a kind of traveling counselor. more than 30 years in the Tamalpais district before becoming child welfare and attendance coordinator two years ago. He was one of the first counselors in the district when the counseling program was started at Tam in 1945. He has also been dean of boys at Tam High and later became assistant principal there.

GEORGE'S WORK sometimes includes working with agencies outside the Tam district, such as the police or the Juvenile Hall. As a child welfare coordinator, he acts as a liaison between the high school and law enforcement agencies when students get into trouble.

"If a truant student refuses to come back to school, we have to bring in the police or Juvenile Hall. But this is always the last resort," he said.

George works closely with many community agencies such as the welfare department, the Catholic Social Service, the Council of Community Services and the Family Service. In certain cases he brings to the student's attention aid that is available from community services such as psychological testing or counseling. Other times he refers families to these services.

"I DON'T always find a solution to every student's problems," he commented. "Sometimes students do drop out at 16, despite counseling."

But George's interest and sympathy continue even after students have quit high school. The district's work experience program or the employment department frequently provide jobs for drop-outs.

George encourages drop-outs to attend night school to get a high school diploma.

Sometimes the student can not fit or adjust to the high school. If parents, principals and teachers agree, it is possible for a student to change to one of the other high schools in the district.

In unusual cases, such as with the physically or mentally handicapped, when the student can't adjust to high school, George assists parents in locating other schools.

NOT ALL of George's cases are of a serious nature.

When calling on a girl who had been suspended, George was met by a Great Dane and 12 newlyborn puppies.

"When I knocked on the girl's door, I heard a deep growl," recalled George. "There, on a blanket in the middle of the living room, was an enormous Great Dane. After discussing the new arrivals thoroughly, we finally got around to discussing her suspension."

George recently has been tracking down a woman who hadn't paid one of his students $21 for doing yard work at a $95,000 house. As it turned out, the woman had been a "cleanup woman" and had skipped town.

JOHN GEORGE is only one man in the complex Tamalpais District pupil personnel service. There are psychologists, counselors and men and women that work with the blind, aurally handicapped and mentally retarded.

Sometimes it is almost comforting to know there still is a "hooky cop" in our modern, complex society.

BEING "TRUANT OFFICER" is no one-man job, and neither are any of the other jobs that make up the Tamalpais District's pupil personnel services. Child Welfare and Attendance Coordinator John George consults with Dr. Janet Lyon, the Tam District psychologist who is also director of special education for the mentally retarded.

The Bargain Box Has Turned 13

Sunny Hills Thrift Shop Survived Fire And Financial Crises In Its Youth

The thrift shop operated by the Sunny Hills Board of Directors for the benefit of the San Anselmo home and treatment center for children with social-adjustment problems marked its 13th birthday this month.

And some of the women responsible for its launching in May, 1951, sat down and recalled some of their early triumphs and setbacks.

THE THRIFT shop was born, Mrs. Edwin A. Wells recalls, out of necessity.

"Even before World War II, some of Sunny Hills' older buildings were in a bad state of repair," she says. "This was especially true of the infirmary building, which was practically falling apart and was in desperate need of enlargement."

Sunny Hills was without means of raising funds for capital improvements. Its Grape Festival receipts and its Community Chest allotment were needed for operating expenses.

MRS. WELLS says the idea of a thrift shop originated with Mrs. Harry Duncan. And that in January, 1951, Mrs. Samuel Archibald, then president of the board, appointed board members Mrs. William Booth, Mrs. Alexander McAndrew and Mrs. Donald Jeffries to work with Mrs. Duncan on the project.

A location above an upholstery shop on the top floor of a two-story house on Fourth Street—near H—in San Rafael was found. The lease was approved, and the shop opened for business May 7, 1951, with Mrs. Booth as its first chairman.

Mrs. Booth credits Mrs. McAndrew with originating the name for the new shop.

"SHE WAS talking about the shop one day and she said, 'If you intend to sell things in that little old bargain box . . .' The rest of the sentence was never finished, for there was a chorus of 'That's it! That's it! That's the name!' And so it has been called ever since."

At the outset, the location seemed ideal. But the Guild members and their friends who staffed the Bargain Box soon discovered that fast-moving traffic on the Miracle Mile whizzed past with little time for glancing in the direction of the shop.

"The volunteers," Mrs. Booth laughs, "were so alarmed by the lack of business that they used to dash out onto the sidewalk in pursuit of pedestrians to invited them into the store to see the merchandise."

FOR THEIR special efforts on behalf of the fledgling business in those precarious early months, Mrs. Booth remembers such names as those of Mrs. Reginald Anderson, Mrs. Philip Nathan and Mrs. Charles Davis in addition to those already-mentioned.

"There were," she adds, "many others, of course, who made major contributions. Indeed, the continued growth of the Bargain Box is due in no small measure to the efforts of those first volunteers, who created a friendly atmosphere for our customers."

Financial prospects varied from time to time, however, and the leaders and their helpers remained in constant dread of the time when the Bargain Box might have to close its doors.

AS ONE means of staving off such a calamity, auctions were attended, bric-a-brac purchased and then resold at the Bargain Box.

After a few months on Miracle Mile, the Bargain Box was moved to roomier quarters on San Rafael's D Street. There, prospects appeared bright. So bright, in fact, that arrangements were made to employ a paid manager for the store.

Mrs. Oliver Cantrell was to begin her duties in that capacity on March 31, 1952. And that was the day that disaster struck.

LET MRS. Wells tell the story:

"The Bargain Box had been in its second location on D between Second and Third (now occupied by Ace Letter Service) for only a little more than four months when the explosion and fire occurred.

"Almost miraculously, no one was hurt.

"Usually, six or seven people were gathered in the small office room by the time the shop opened at 10 a.m. On that particular morning, one thing or another had detained the people who habitually arrived early. Mrs. Anderson (now Mrs. Norman Halsey), chairman of consignment articles, was called back to the telephone just as she was leaving for the shop. Mrs. William Allen missed her bus. Mrs. Cantrell was late arriving from Fairfax. And I, having succeeded to the Bargain Box chairmanship only the previous day, had planned to drive directly to the shop and stop there before continuing on to a Sunny Hills board meeting. But there was a parking space in front of Henrietta's Children's Shop, and I couldn't resist stopping there to make a quick exchange of a child's garment.

"SO IT was Mrs. William Pomeroy, on duty that day as a volunteer, who was the first to arrive. She went into the office, turned up the themostat and then, remembering she had left her knitting in her car, hurried outside to get it.

"Just as she reached the door, there was a dreadful explosion. Gas had evidently collected in the floor furnace. And the office was instantly filled with flames.

"The fire department arrived simultaneously with the delayed Bargain Box personnel." Sunny Hills board members adjourned their meeting to rush to the scene.

Mrs. Wells was able to save the Bargain Box records which, fortunately, were stored in the drawer of a heavy wooden table that had been donated by Albert's Department Store.

"THEY WERE wet and singed, but decipherable," she says, and explains: "This was important because then, a good deal of the merchandise sold by the Bargain Box was on consignment." Later the Bargain Box was to discontinue the sale of consigned articles.

Following the fire, the building was declared unsafe for occupancy. A carpenters' strike made renovation uncertain. Sunny Hills directors were in a quandary.

As a temporary measure, the salvageable and some not-so-salvageable stock was mov-

Women Who Founded Bargain Box Look Back To That Beginning

ed to a large vacant building on the Grape Festival grounds at Sunny Hills in San Anselmo. Once a schoolhouse for Sunny Hills children, it had been used from time to time as a gymnasium and was commonly referred to as "the barn." It now houses the annual "Peacock Alley" sale of clothing and accessories conducted by the San Anselmo Guild on Grape Festival day.

BOARDS ACROSS sawhorses served as display tables for that merchandise from which the soot had been washed. On May 1, 1952, the Bargain Box was open to the public once again.

The barn proved cold and drafty. It was unheated, the roof leaked and the wind whistled through broken window panes. The weather was wet, and the grounds which had to be crossed to reach the barn were a veritable swamp. But, to the women's amazement, they had more customers than when they had occupied comfortable quarters in the middle of San Rafael.

Soggy and stained merchandise, periodically soaked again by rain through the roof leaks and still being sorted by volunteers, was snatched and bought by eager customers.

THE SEARCH was on for more habitable and permanent quarters, but nothing appropriate could be found. And it was urgent that the barn be vacated before the Grape Festival in October.

Finally, the finance committee of the Sunny Hills board authorized the construction of a building, if it could be built for $6,000 or less, and if a loan for that amount could be obtained, on a site at one corner of the Grape Festival grounds.

Mrs. Wells went "bank shopping." George Dagnall, then manager of the San Rafael branch of the Bank of America, took an immediate interest in the project and made funds available at a special low rate of interest.

AND THE new building became a reality — at a cost of $5,939 — with extras donated by friends.

Eleanor Beales, a hard-working Bargain Box volunteer, had succeeded Mrs. Cantrell as manager. And an open house was held Oct. 8, 1952, and the following day the Bargain Box opened for business in its new location.

Since then, the Bargain Box record has been one of growth and achievement.

MRS. CARLO Caletti, the present chairman, says that the shop now does approximately $3,500 a month business "in nickels and dimes, and every month we are trying to surpass the sales volume of the corresponding month."

Mrs. Edward Superka, liaison woman between the Bargain Box and Sunny Hills directors, joins Mrs. Caletti in enumerating the many improvement projects at Sunny Hills which proceeds from the Bargain Box have made possible. The infirmary, long ago, underwent the needed renovations. There was an emergency termite damage repair program. Road repairs were financed by profits from the salvage shop. A deficit that had arisen in the endowment fund was defrayed. The cost of the Bargain Box building itself was paid off in quick order. A director's cottage was built and furnished. And most recently, the Bargain Box made possible the purchase of a new Sunny Hills group home.

While the Bargain Box has made major contributions to Sunny Hills and the youth served by the treatment center, it has also, the women responsible for it feel, served its community well.

SAYS MRS. Nathan, who was the third Bargain Box chairman: "We have helped others while we have helped ourselves."

One faithful customer told the women that, without the Bargain Box, she would have been unable to clothe her children properly.

Many have purchased clothing to be sent overseas to relatives, friends and needy persons. One such donor brought in a photograph showing an overseas wedding party. The bride's wedding gown, the bridegroom's tuxedo and the dress worn by the mother of the bride had all come from the Bargain Box.

Mrs. Albert Borchert and Muriel Hill are the present managers of the Bargain Box. Serving with chairman Mrs. Caletti on the Bargain Box committee are Mrs. Superka, Mrs. Wells, Mrs. Edward Boero, Mrs. Raymond Hasenauer and Mrs. Dudley Miller. Mrs. Donald MacRae is the Junior Auxiliary Bargain Box chairman.

THE SUNNY Hills guilds and the Junior Auxiliary members staff the shop Monday through Friday. On Saturday, interested women from the community take over the duties.

All articles sold in the shop are gifts from Sunny Hills friends. The women remember such contributions as the marvelous windfall that came their way in hundreds of yards of beautiful materials from the estate of the Worn sisters who had decorated for many of San Francisco's most elaborate and tasteful debutante and wedding parties.

ALL CONTRIBUTIONS to the shop are tax deductible.

The Bargain Box women can also remember some unintentional gifts. Mrs. Charles Davis, the project's first treasurer, reported one day for work on the books — and laid her new coat on the back of a chair. When she looked for it — it was gone. The satisfied customer who had purchased the new coat was never identified.

Similar incidents have occurred at other times. This year one of the volunteers lost her new sweater when it was sold by error.

Mrs. Wells says of the Bargain Box patrons: "Most of them are wonderful people. They select with care, and come back faithfully year after year, week after week, some day after day." But, she adds, there is that handful who attempt to switch low price tags onto the better garments.

LOOKING BACK those 13 years to the day she made the first rental payment for the Bargain Box's first home, Mrs. Archibald says today: "It turned out to be one of the happiest investments I ever made."

THIS HAS BEEN the location of the Sunny Hills Bargain Box thrift shop since October of 1952. Previously the shop, founded in 1951, had been located in two different San Rafael buildings, and in "the barn" on the Sunny Hills grounds. The present site is a corner of the grounds where the annual Sunny Hills Grape Festival is staged. (Independent-Journal photo)

She Swims To Music

Kris Ronneberg Likes Her Water Sport Synchronized

They are the synchronized swimmers who vie in grace.

SHE COMES from a swimming family. "Swimming is just part of my life," she says, "and I love it."

"IT DOESN'T involve the endurance that speed swimming requires," she explains, "and I felt that I was better suited to it physically."

Her synchronized swimming coach, the famed Ann Curtis Cuneo, says that the difference between synchronized and speed swimming is approximately the same as the difference between figure and speed skating.

Synchronized swimming, she adds, is more closely related to diving than it is to speed swimming.

"IT APPEALS to girls who are artistically inclined and have a strong sense of rhythm," she says. "Less sheer physical strength is required."

The development of body control is the chief compensation the girls receive from the hours they devote to developing grace and rhythm in the water.

"BUT WHAT most people do not realize," Mrs. Cuneo adds, "is that our best women lifeguards are the products of synchronized swimming. This is because they learn to handle themselves so well in the water."

Mrs. Cuneo sees nothing strange that the Ann Curtis of Olympic speed swimming fame should be coaching and teaching the far different sport of synchronized swimming.

"My sister and I used to do a little synchronized swimming, although the sport was at that time in no way as well developed or as well organized as it is today," she says. "Then, after I turned professional, I appeared in the Aqua Follies in what were essentially synchronized swimming routines."

AN ANN CURTIS Cuneo-coached team with Kris Ronneberg among the members finished seventh in the national championships two years ago.

Her synchronized swimmers have been popular performers in the traditional Ballet Aquacade, colorful fund raising event for the Marindale School for physically handicapped children, and they will be appearing again next weekend in the 19th annual aquacade.

Representing the Ann Curtis School of Swimming will be four members of the school's "A" synchronized swimming team, eight girls from the "B" synchronized swimming team and six speed swimmers. They will be part of a cast of more than 300 young dancers and swimmers.

THE BALLET Aquacade performances are scheduled for the Peacock Gap Tennis and Swimming Club on San Pedro Road, San Rafael, next Saturday at 2:30 p.m., and again on Sunday at the same hour.

For Kris Ronneberg, it will mark her sixth appearance in the Ballet Aquacade. She began as a seventh grader. And it will be the third time that she has performed with the Ann Curtis School's synchronized swimmers in their intricate and beautiful "to music" routines.

It will be her final appearances in a Ballet Aquacade. Next year she will be in college. And it will also be her final fling at serious synchronized swimming.

THIS SUMMER she will attend the University of Guadalajara in Mexico "to learn about other people and their language." Mexico was chosen by Kris because the Ronneberg family has two exchange students from that country living with them. Through those young guests, Kris became very interested in our neighbor to the south.

When Kris has completed her summer school, her family will join her so that they can all spend some time with their "exchange families."

HER COLLEGE studies, she says, will not leave her sufficient time to devote the necessary hours to practice, although, of course, the swimming pool will continue to be her favorite place of recreation.

In preparing for an approaching competitive meet, Kris says, the synchronized swimmers sometimes worked out for three hours in the morning, another hour or hour-and-a-half in the evening.

Most of the meets are held in the spring and summer months.

ROUTINES to music are worked out jointly by the coach and the swimmers themselves, Kristin says.

"First you have to hit upon a theme, then we all suggest strokes and maneuvers to carry out that theme."

Kris says that a number of former speed swimmers have switched to the synchronized sport—"ballet in the water," she calls it — "because they have found it is not as grueling."

"Synchronized swimmers develop more slowly than do speed swimmers," she says. "At about 17 or 18, they are nearing their peak. And it is then that so many of them retire, because they are off to college, or they are going to be married, or they have developed other interests."

The ranks of her "A" swimmers are now down to four. The "B" swimmers, girls about 12 and 13, contain some bright prospects as replacements. But Mrs. Cuneo is on the watch for new recruits for her swim-to-music team.

SHE CAN promise them the enjoyment that comes from achievement that is both athletic and artistic. And she can promise them the development of poise and grace that will serve them well throughout their lives.

The performances next weekend of Kris Ronneberg and the other Ann Curtis water ballet swimmers at the Aquacade will furnish a convincing demonstration of these assets from a growing sport. If young girls among the spectators like what they see, then perhaps they might want to take it up for themselves.

Kris Ronneberg says she has never regretted her selection of synchronized swimming as her sport.

"It has provided me with some wonderful experiences," she says. "I'll always look back on it with pleasure."

"WHAT HAPPENED TO MY NYLON OVERSKIRT?"

Today the majority of fabrics are manufactured from synthetic yarns and fibers. Because many of these fibers melt or fuse under excessive heat or pressure, extreme care must be taken in "finishing" or pressing them.

In the case of your fine nylon overskirt, the fibers were both fused and scorched from excessive heat. The same will happen to Dynel, Dacron and acetate fibers under excessive heat and pressure.

Incidentally, acetate and wool fabrics also will break at creases after repeated pressings unless they are correctly handled. Therefore, it is safest to entrust your garments to those professionals who have the training, equipment and skill to cleanse and preserve them for you. That is their business and their responsibility. Under their care the disappointment you had with your nylon overskirt would have been avoided.

INSIDE the Westerley Tea and Spice House, Stephen K. Lee goes about his duties of blending teas. It is a skill he learned in his native Formosa where his father, S. Y. Lee, is the tea taster for Tait and Co. Ltd., the world's largest tea merchants. The elder Lee is regarded as the world's foremost authority in his field. And his son is not far behind him.

Taiwan Taster Of Tea

By DOROTHY GARDINER

Tea chests from remote corners of the Far East and Orient are arriving in Tiburon to stock the shelves of Marin's newest gourmet specialty shop.

Westerley Tea and Spice House Ltd. opened its doors facing Main Street three months ago, introducing a third-generation tea expert from Formosa to Marin coffee, tea and spice fanciers.

Stephen K. Lee, a scholarly 35-year-old native of Taipei, Taiwan, daily dispenses 15 special coffees, 84 varieties of spices and herbs and the choicest teas he can buy on the international tea market.

LEE "GREW UP" in the tea business," and until two years ago was senior assistant for Tait and Co. Ltd., "world's largest tea merchants," located in Formosa.

A Taiwan Tea Taster Brings His Talents To Tiburon

is Tait's tea taster and considered "the world's leading tea authority," the son relates. "I was being trained to take over my father's job someday."

But the younger Lee's career was interrupted late in 1962 when he started a two year leave of absence from the firm that had employed him since his graduation from college 15 years ago so that he might bring his family to San Francisco to seek treatment for a crippled child.

FIVE YEARS ago his first-born son, Ernie, was injured at birth and subsequently paralyzed, Lee explains. After failing to find medical help for the boy in Formosa, the father decided to try the University of California Medical Center.

"Ernie is now able to walk with crutches and even jump," Lee hopefully reports, "and he started school in San Francisco last month."

So that his son might continue treatment under the doctors who have done "so much to improve his condition," Lee decided to stay in the Bay Area. But in order to remain, "I had to find a job in my field" to meet U. S. Immigration requirements, he adds.

TAIT HAD made arrangements for Lee to work in a tea firm here, but "this didn't work out when the company was forced to close its local operation," Lee says.

A chance meeting at a cocktail party in San Francisco last December resulted in Lee's finding a job and the Westerley Co.'s coming to Marin.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. West attended the party hosted by friends to commemorate Chinese New Year. There they met Stephen Lee.

Mary Priscilla West, mother of a 20-year-old University of Arizona junior and herself on medical leave from the Marin County Welfare Department where she is a social worker, explains, "I had wanted to open a store in Tiburon for some time."

BECOMING "fascinated" by Lee's vast knowledge of the tea industry, Mrs. West decided tea and spice might be just the business to bring to Tiburon.

Lee agreed to become Westerley's manager, blender and taster, and went to work immediately ordering 150 pounds of each quality tea.

(The tea was deliberately ordered in small lots to insure freshness, Lee says, "we depend on regular shipments from seasonal harvests.")

He designed and ordered from a San Francisco manufacturer a special air-tight cannister to package Westerley's tea. "Tea is very sensitive and easy to contaminate," he warns, "and should never be stored near strong spice such as pepper."

"WE ARE selling more tea than coffee," reports Mrs. West, who is a five-year resident of Marin now living with her family at 28 Marinero Circle, Tiburon.

Mrs. West registers surprise at the popularity of her tea since "tea drinkers only number 15 per cent of the population."

"A good tea," he says, "is always fresh in smell, has aroma infusion (it should retain an aroma after brewing) and a sweet, strong and fragrant taste."

"TEA GROWN in high altitudes is bound to be good," he adds. "Some are Darjeerling, Keemun, Assam and some Ceylon."

The very best teas are from northeast India and Ceylon. Good tea also comes from Formosa and Java, he points out.

The weather plays a major role in the growing of a good tea, he says. "Four crops are produced in the Formosa tea season—Spring: bearing good green or jasmine tea; Summer: black tea; Autumn: average tea; Winter: poor tea.

A TEA company such as Tait and Co. buys "green leaf tea" from farmers all over the world, Lee explains. The green leaf grows on large bushes sometimes reaching 30 to 60 feet high. Each leaf must be plucked individually by hand.

The green leaf is next shipped to a raw tea factory where it is decided which of the green leaf is to be used for black and green teas.

Next the green leaf is put through "a withering process," Lee says, in which the green leaf to be made into green tea is "sundried to obtain a yellow color," while the green leaf for black tea is "wind-dried to maintain green color."

FOLLOWING this, coolies place the tea into rolling machines "to twist the leaves." Lee adds, "the black tea goes into a large device holding almost 200 pounds, while the green tea is placed in a small machine holding only a 10 to 20 pound load."

The leaves for black tea are put through a "fermentation process," Lee says, "to be cooled by water spray to about 45 to 50 degrees for about 50 minutes." During this step the leaves lose their green color and become copper-gold, he adds.

Next leaves for both black and green teas are placed in a firing machine for drying, he notes. A large conveyor belt carries the leaf over burning charcoal and when this cooking process is complete, the leaf has "become moutea or raw tea," Lee explains.

THIS MOUTEA is then sent to a refining factory for "cutting, cleaning and classifying," he says. It is classified according to size of leaf and ultimately sold as "flowery orange pekoe, pekoe, orange pekoe, broken orange pekoe, broken orange pekoe, broken leaf, fanning and dust, or stalks."

From the refining factory the tea moves to the tasting room where the company's sole tea taster tests each sample and passes on the quality of every tea processed by the firm, Lee says.

"One taster is responsible for the company's blending, and for adjusting the price of the tea for the international market," he adds.

"This taster also determines what tea is to be sent to what country, since each country has a tea preference," Lee points out. (The American market buys average priced tea, Lee interjects.)

LEE STARTED his education to become a tea taster "at 6 or 7 by going to the office with my father and asking questions."

Later, "my father sent me to tea estates all over Formosa to see how tea is grown and differentiate between the hundreds of teas."

Lee's grandfather was a tea merchant from Amoy, China, who immigrated to Formosa. Lee's own father started in the tea industry 61 years ago.

The young Lee was sent to private schools in Hong Kong when he was 8 and graduated from St. Joseph's College with a degree in English Literature when he was 21 years old.

BESIDES mastering English, Lee also speaks French, some Arabic and seven dialects of Chinese.

After college he returned to Taipei and went to work for Tait "as an apprentice in the tea room washing cups, boiling water, cleaning floors and unpacking tea along with the coolies in the godown (warehouse)."

Later he worked in a raw tea factory "cutting and firing" and learned the art of tasting by practicing after finishing cleanup duty.

Four years later Tait qualified him as an "independent authority, tea buyer and tea taster," he notes.

THE FIRM then sent the young tea merchant to London, Hong Kong, India and Ceylon to work in the tea market.

In 1956, while back in Formosa, he met and married an attractive airline stewardess. They spent the first year of married life stationed in North Africa where the bridegroom toiled as a tea coordinator for Tait and Co.

Comparing life here to that in Formosa, Lee said that things "are much more hectic here" and that people "work much harder than at home."

But he hopes to be able to stay in the Bay Area. His future depends on two things, he states — his son's medical needs and how "things work out at Westerley."

SO FAR things are working out well, Lee reports. Much of the original stock has been sold out and reordered and "half our orders are being shipped out of state."

("We will mail an order anywhere, COD," he says.)

Mrs. West, who before meeting her manager and entering the tea business boasted of downing 32 cups of coffee daily, now proudly endorses her tea. "I don't drink coffee anymore, but I may be drinking up all of the tea profits myself."

IN A FACTORY on Formosa, an apprentice goes about his duties of selecting leaves from raw tea for processing. If he is selecting leaves for green tea, it will be sun-dried. If it is black tea that will result, wind-drying will be the next process.

THE TEA COOLIE performs some of the more menial jobs in the tea-testing room of Tait and Co. Ltd. of Taipei, Taiwan, such as washing the cups, boiling water, cleaning floors and unpacking tea.

THE UTMOST CARE is taken by Stephen K. Lee in the buying and blending of his teas at the Westerley Tea and Spice House Ltd. in Tiburon. But it is important, too, he stresses, that the customer follow the proper procedure in brewing the tea. His instructions: Use porcelain or ceramic pot. Boil water and pour boiling water into the pot, sloshing it around to warm the pot. Then pour out the water. Place a teaspoon of tea per cup in the teapot. Pour the boiling water into the pot over the tea leaves. Permit steeping from one to five minutes, depending on how strong you prefer your tea.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR: HER LIFE, HER LOVES, HER FUTURE by Ruth Waterbury, Appleton-Century, 310 pages, $4.95.

MY PEOPLE IS THE ENEMY by William Stringfellow, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 150 pages, $3.95.

STEPHEN VINCENT BENET ON WRITING edited by George Abbe, Stephen Greene Press, 112 pages, $3.95.

In her "Elizabeth Taylor: Her Life, Her Loves, Her Future," Ruth Waterbury sets out to tell "the true and significant story of this most beautiful and controversial woman of our time" and also to "relate something of the anatomy of stardom. . . ."

The life and loves of Liz are there in great detail. What is missing is any really penetrating analysis of the significance of that peculiar institution, stardom, in the American social picture.

This is hardly surprising, for Miss Waterbury is a member of Louella Parson's staff. As a Hollywood "insider" herself, she is blind to the basic absurdities of the Elizabeth Taylor story. Like her boss Louella and the equally shallow and silly Hedda Hopper, she regards the tinsel glitter as having real substance.

Thus when young Mike Todd Jr., attending last rites for his father, describes his dad as "the greatest human being who ever lived," one can understand such sentiment from a grieving son. But one rather suspects that Miss Waterbury half shares this ridiculous opinion.

If you want the details of Liz and Nicky, Liz and Michael, Liz and Mike, Liz and Eddie, Liz and Richard, Liz and other men she did not marry, Miss Waterbury provides them. There's an inside look at opulence and idolatry on the Hollywood star strata. But you'll have to supply your own insight as to the basic vulgarity and insanity of it all. The author is too close to and too dazzled by the showmanship to see or sense the fundamental superficiality.

Stringfellow is the young Harvard - graduate attorney who chose the worst block in New York City's worst slum in which to live and practice law. In East Harlem, he not only worked for, but mingled with the neglected minorities.

As a result of this unique and intimate association, Stringfellow has formed strong opinions on racial matters. He expresses them in his newest book, "My People is the Enemy."

His message boils down to a warning for the whites that time is running out fast. Soon we will be paying a terrible price in racial chaos for our abuse and neglect of our darker countrymen. Already, the initiative has passed from the white to the black man. Basic rights are not things to be earned, or to be offered or withheld. White supremacy is outmoded. And even if this myth is surrendered voluntarily, we can expect a period of outright hostility and rejection from the Negroes before a reconciliation can take place.

Stringfellow also has challenging views on narcotics, poverty, intermarriages, the law and minorities, the urban church — all closely tied to the basic racial question.

His monetary compensation for his work among the ghetto-dwellers certainly is a pittance compared to the outlandish salaries paid Liz Taylor and other Hollywood celebrities. But which has received the greater personal satisfaction? Stringfellow's would be greater, to be sure, if he had the peace of mind of knowing that white society is, indeed, wise enough to heed his warning and avoid its day of judgment. Clearly, he has no such confidence.

THE NEUROSES of Elizabeth Taylor, and of the bigots and the products of their bigotry that concern Stringfellow, are all too evident. However, say Snell and Gail J. Putney, a husband and wife team of sociology professors at San Jose State College, much of what Americans regard as normal, adjusted behavior is in truth neurotic and irrational.

In their "Normal Neuroses —the Adjusted American" they advance the premise that what man really needs is a self-image acceptable to himself.

Where he runs into trouble is when he strives to achieve this image indirectly — through the impression he creates on others. Thus results conformity, hostility, falsity, pressure.

The Putneys challenge such commonly accepted American concepts as marriage for romantic love, parental love, obligation to others, our political institutions, the worship of money and talent. All these, they say, and many more "normal" facets of our way of life stand in the way of the truly autonomous individual. And in our current complex and rootless society only the man who has achieved a rational and objective autonomy is in a position to satisfy his needs. Otherwise, neuroses and misdirection prevail.

As the Putneys suggest at the outset, this is a book which requires more than mere reading. It requires study and self-examination as well. It is certainly a provocative train of thought.

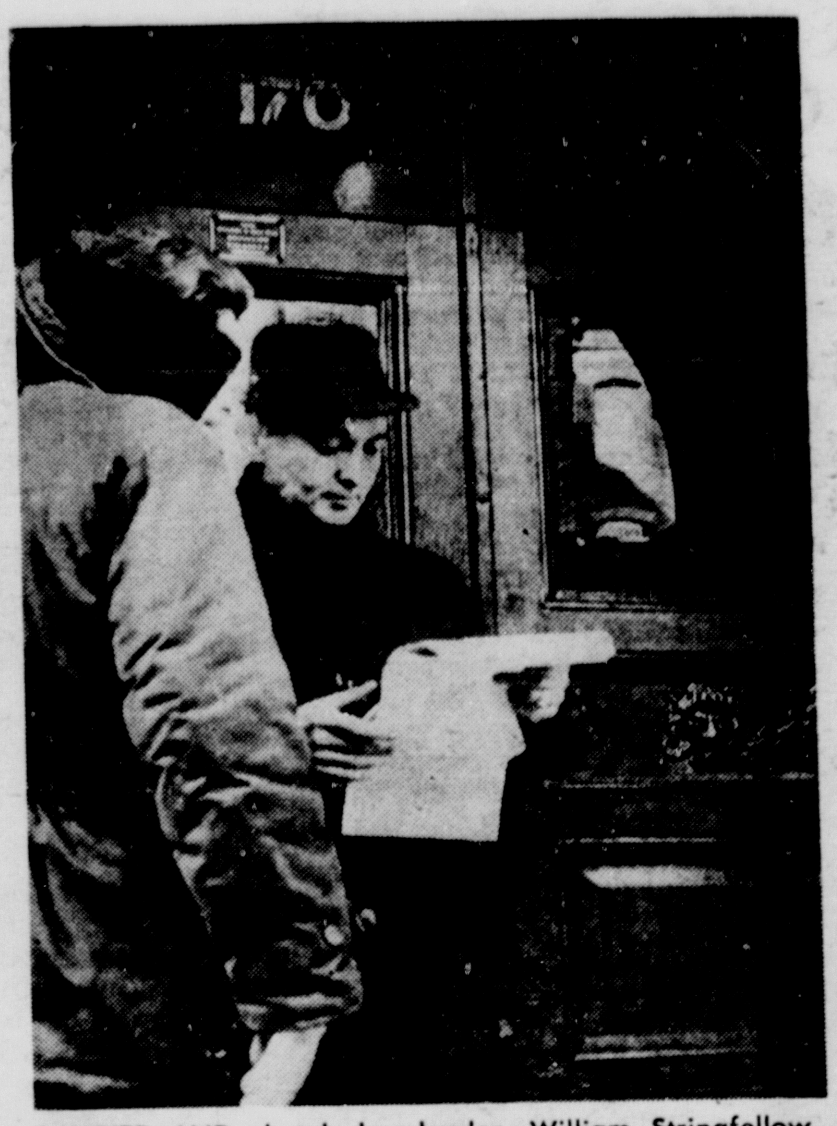
MARIN'S many established and aspiring writers would do well to take notice of the little book, "Stephen Vincent Benet on Writing," especially if they are inclined toward fiction.

The book contains 30 letters written by Benet (once a military academy student in San Rafael) to younger novelist-short story writer George Abbe.

In his comments, Benet is both general, covering the whole field of fiction, and specific about Abbe's particular work in progress. It is down-to-earth, intensely practical guidance, for Benet was a discerning and inspiring teacher, critic and scholar as well as gifted author.

Abbe has added his own introduction and commentary, so that the reader receives the benefit of the experience and talents of, not just one, but two successful writers.

It is the best thing of its kind we have encountered.



LAWYER AND church lay leader, William Stringfellow, who chose to live and work in a Harlem slum block, is pictured on the steps of a New York municipal court with a client. Stringfellow is the author of "My People Is the Enemy" subtitled "An Autobiographical Polemic." Holt, Rinehart and Winston is the publisher.

TWO OF ITS Sunset Travel Books have been published by Lane Book Co. in revised editions with updated information and additional illustrations. The books, "Northern California" and "Southern California" are excellent references for friends or relatives who might be planning vacation trips in our state this year. They are equally valuable for Californians who plan to spend their weeks away from work in their home state. The books sell for $1.95 each.

"MISSISSIPPI: The Closed Society" is the title of a book by James W. Silver, professor at the University of Mississippi, that is to be published June 22 by Harcort, Brace & World. It is a study of the rioting that occurred when Negro James Meredith was enrolled at Old Miss, and of the events which had set the stage for that violence.

LAWRENCE Ferlinghetti's City Lights Books of San Francisco has published "Human Songs" by Kay Johnson, American poet residing in Greece. The poems are noteworthy for their diversity of feeling and of subject matter, and for the straight-forward, forceful statement of the poet's messages. The paperback sells for $1.50.

Sleuths & Suspense

DEATH'S FOOT FORWARD by George B. Mair, Random House, 208 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Some of these writers have simply aped the Fleming style. Others have developed individualistic styles of their own that vary greatly from, and sometimes improve upon, the Bond yarns.

George B. Mair seems to be among the Fleming mimics. He utilizes the basic Fleming technique, exaggerates its more spectacular features, and, as a result, his Dr. David Grant tales read like parodies of the Bond novels—which, in themselves, have parody qualities.

Mair, himself a physician as well as traveler and adventurer, sends Grant, a doctor who doubles at a NATO security agent, into the very heart of the Kremlin itself on a danger-fraught mission in "Deathe's Foot Forward." There is violence, sex, gore, flamboyant heroism, sadism, new wonder weapons, sinister villains, and all the other accouterments of a spy novel of the Fleming school.

The best thing about the book is Mair's apparently authentic knowledge of Moscow and the tightly guarded Kremlin. But the Mair flourishes may prove to be a bit too much for even some Fleming fans.

SOCIOLOGY PROFESSORS at San Jose State and husband and wife are Gail Putney and Snell Putney. They are the co-authors of the new Harper & Row book, "Normal Neuroses—the Adjusted American," a study of the American behavior pattern.

Slithery World

The world of lizards, snakes and turtles probably is not a familiar nor interesting one to many persons, even those bent on general knowledge of nature. But anyone who has gardened, fished in streams and lakes and walked in the forest or desert has come across some of the slithery creatures — and paused to wonder at Mother Nature's leftovers.

Giant lizards, monstrous turtles, reptiles that flew once ruled the world. Now the warm-blooded creatures hold sway, although many of them, such as rats, mice and rabbits, fall prey to smaller lizards of today.

Barker obviously warms to a cold subject. He admits he never handled a snake until an adult, and only then found by actual contact that snakes are cold but dry—not slimy at all. While these animals contend with a variety of climate, they must be fairly selective in their environment to survive. Salamanders need moisture—they're not really the fire animals the ancients believed. Snakes warm themselves, then seek cooling shade.

This is a book for adults and teen-agers who are interested in science, a fine handbook for those in the last two year of high school and in college. It is neither a pocketbook nor an encyclopedia, but is a penetrating account of these wild animals, their value, their eating and mating habits, and it is scientifically complete without being verbose. The drawings are excellent.

Founding Fathers

A TRANSACTION OF FREE MEN by David Hawke, Charles Scribner's Sons, 246 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Ellen Dietschy.

Much research into accounts of the many days of debate which resulted in adoption of the Declaration of Independence has gone into this well-written book by a professor of American history at New York's Pace College.

The important part Thomas Jefferson of Virginia and John Adams of Massachusetts played in the formation and adoption of the declaration is emphasized with little-known comparisons and contrasts made of their different backgrounds and personalities.

The author painstakingly discusses Jefferson's many changes in his original draft of the preamble and body of the document, giving the reader an insight into the personal beliefs of Jefferson which are not readily discernible from the text adopted by the Continental Congress.

Students of American history and the lives of Jefferson and Adams, who Jefferson called the "Colossus of Independence" as a result of his leadership in the fight for adoption of the Declaration of Independence, will be especially pleased with the care Hawke has used in writing about an act so "treasonable" in nature that Congress delayed releasing the names of the document's signers for five months after independence was declared.

For Sufferers

SHAME THE DEVIL by Nancy Moore, Dodd, Mead & Co., 331 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Jean Lyttle.

Set in the modern day "Deep South," this, the second novel by author Nancy Moore, manages to bring to the reader a cross-section of the typical modern writer's bedroom trauma.

The devil — Mark King, lecher, drunkard and adulterer, is the high-living playboy who shatters the placid, genteel lives of members of a sleepy southern village. Chief among these is a beautiful child-bride whose stern husband, unable to put his true feelings of love into words, drives her into the arms of "the devil."

Things do seem to go from bad to worse. The effect of all this on the two little daughters, best friends, really depresses the reader.

Different View

THE CRUMBLING FORTRESS by Willi Heinrich, Dial Press, 343 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

The events of World War II have been well hashed over by writers from many lands, but Heinrich, a former German soldier, has managed to present a view from a new angle.

He focuses on the human backwash . . . refugees, collaborators and deserters . . . seeking asylum in a mountain hideout as the war comes to a close.

Discovery by any one of the approaching forces, German army, Allied army or French underground guerillas, means death for some and salvation for others.

Although they fought on opposing sides in the war, individual members of the group unite in a common effort, and humanity overcomes political and national allegiance.

For example, the love affair is between a Swiss youth, who fought in the German army and deserted, and a young Jewish girl who was persecuted by the Germans.

Within this small framework of bewildered people, Heinrich expertly reflects the confusion of war, its ideologies and its participants.

In an amazing show of objectivity, Heinrich does not give the Germans the best of it, nor does he rationalize about their role or make excuses.

The Good Life

MOOCHING MOOSE AND MEN by Joe Back, Johnson Mumbling Publishing Co. 131 pages, $2.95. Reviewed by Lee Cadwallader.

Some people feel they've found Shangri-La when they've discovered Dubois, Wyo., in the banana belt of the Rockies, near Jackson Hole. But it takes a lot of guts or an independent income to settle there.

However, if you have talent, great integrity and the inventiveness of Rube Goldberg you can manage to stay. That's just what cowboy artist, sculptor and writer Joe Back has. Also, he has an ear for the unique way the natives of this region talk.

These packers, ranchers and lumbermen, who rarely have a high school education, read Shakespeare because he tells a good story and because his words sound just great when recited from atop a bar stool on a Saturday night.

They love our language and they learn the more attractive words straight from the dictionary. This produces combinations that are sometimes startling, but never trite.

Undefiled Nature makes life in Dubois more dangerous than being a commuter in Califorina. The natives adjust to the danger and isolation by making an art of telling humorous folk tales based on fact, but ridiculing danger. Joe Back catches the real spirit of these tales on paper. Through a natural gift he also shows the mores and moral principles of the people.

Updike and Salinger have better style than Back—that's true. But they show no promise of giving us a better picture of real men living the good life.

Exciting Novel

FALLING THROUGH THE NIGHT by Alexander Fedoroff, Ivan Obolensky Inc., 302 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Jean Lyttle.

In theme, this is an exciting novel by Alexander Fedoroff, whose first novel, "The Side of the Angels," had national success.

A young man, Clay Duclos, abandons his training as a sixth-year Jesuit and begins his search of values in the morally confused and disoriented world of the "southern gentlemen" in the South.

The first problem he faces is that of the backwoods Negro women and their many children, who have just been cut off the state's welfare program because they are unmarried. Feeling runs high as he struggles, with just a handful of backers, to bring desperately needed aid, culminating with real Ku Klux Klan action against him.

He embarks on a passionate love affair with an appealing young girl which helps him in his search for self-discovery and adds beauty to an otherwise discouraging scene.

Author Fedoroff has the talent for telling a gripping story. However, as the novel goes on, so many sub-plots, with their problems, are added that the reader tends to become involved with these and the potency of the original theme is diluted.

For The Children—

Some recommended books for the young, younger and youngest readers:

A child's pocket usually serves as his own private, portable treasure box filled with unusual items, but even a child will find surprises in Eve Merriam's "What Can You Do With a Pocket?" (Alfred A. Knopf, $3.50). Colorful illustrations by Harriet Sherman add zest to the surprises, and amusement for children 5 to 8.

Perkins, a new boy in town, sees at once that he isn't going to excel physically in his new surroundings. So he sets out to be "Perkins the Brain"—the smartest boy in town. But his efforts to prove his smartness lead to humorous complications. The book is by Dale Bick Carlson with illustrations by Albert W. D. Carlson (Doubleday, $2.95). It is fun for boys in the 8-to-10 range.

"At the Seashore," by W. W. Robinson (Lane, $2.95), is a revised edition with illustrations by Irene B. Robinson. This is the perfect yacation book if you are going to stay at the seashore. This is an exciting visit for those in the 9 to 12-year-old bracket. What are sandpipers? Seahorses? Octupi? What fun are shells! Here's family fun for the brothers and sisters. Take this book along for a weekend or a week or a month at the beach.

Both child and parent are in for a treat in "The Pinkish, Purplish, Bluish Egg" by Disneyland artist Bill Peet (Houghton Mifflin). It's a delightful tale of a lonely Myrtle dove, whose "children had flown off and left her that day," and a strange oval-shaped "rock." The text is in rhyme, the illustrations in color, and the jolly book is perfect for reading aloud.

Tony Palazzo is at his best with his beautiful and appealing ilustrations for his "Waldo the Woodchuck" (Duell, Sloan and Pearce, $2.95). The colors are bright and gay in keeping with the rollicking tone of the adventures and misadventures of the little groundhog who is the book's hero. An exceptional effort, even by Palazzo's always high standards.

Virginia Parson's "Rides" (Doubleday $1.95) is a colorful excursion in itself for the youngster up to 5 years of age. Attractive, detailed illustrations and appealing texts portray a variety of journeys from a simple ride in a rocking chair to an exciting balloon trip for the tots. A good picture book for the little children.

The Stereo Scene:
New 'Pops' Discs

By JOHN SUNIER
Program Manager, KBRG

New pops records from Capitol:

THE ANDREWS GOSPEL SINGERS — "Open Your Heart" — Capitol Stereo ST 1959:

Now that the pop-gospel sound furor has pretty much died down, we can regain some appreciation of the wonderful and inspirational genuine gospel music such as that sung by these six sisters from Berkeley.

All of them are members of a Berkeley church where they began singing and were picked up for an appearance at the Monterey Jazz Festival which started them into the big-time. Before they signed their contract with Capitol Records they had to change their name from the Andrews Sisters to the Andrews Gospel Singers to avoid confusion with another vocal group which bears no resemblance whatsoever in style.

This is shouting, stomping, genuinely felt Negro church music. For a sample of this amazing singing, try the title tune of the lp, or "He's a Mighty God."

BRAZIL'S BRILLIANT JOAO GILBERTO with Antonio Jobim Orchestra—Capitol Stereo ST 10280:

Another musical fad, the bossa nova, is responsible for eclipsing the genuine musical style of this Brazilian guitarist. With Jobim, Gilberto is really responsible for the start of the whole bossa nova hullaballoo.

These are quiet, subdued, but at the same time sensuous and masculine vocals with Spanish guitar accompaniment and quiet latin percussive effects in the background. The top "One-Note Samba" is included.

This idea is far from creative, since Dave Brubeck began the recent interest in unusual time signatures with his "Take Five" album. However, the latest sounds of the Kenton organization are very creative and listenable.

One Tract, 12 Styles

Subdivision In Lucas Valley Attracting Many Visitors

Hundreds of people have been driving down Highway 101 to Lucas Valley Road to view the new American Housing Guild Twelveoak Hill subdivision by Marin Master Builders in Lucas Valley.

There are 12 styles to choose from—four different floor plans with three exterior elevations. The lots are large and each house has a large family room, oak wood flooring, floor-to-ceiling fireplace, built-in Frigidaire appliances, silent switches, window walls and many other luxury features.

One plan, the ultra-modern V model, has a courtyard entrance into a large living room with a massive fireplace wall. The family room and dining room are accessible to the kitchen which allow for easy informal and formal entertaining. This plan has four bedrooms and two baths.

Another unusual model is the Y tri-level plan with three bedrooms, three baths and a wet bar in the family room. One of the baths is conveniently located off the family room.

The B model is a two-story home with all five bedrooms located on the upper floor. The F model is a ranch-style house, and the lowest priced of the four.

The Twelveoak Hill homes are priced at:

B Model—$29,950; F Model—$25,950; V Model—$28,950; and Y Model—$28,950.

Big two-car garages are still another attraction. Closets have cedar floors. Federal Housing Authority, G.I. and conventional financing are all available.

Schools and shopping facilities are readily available from the new development.

The furnished model homes are open for public inspection daily. Rod Bray, sales manager for Marin Master Builders, says the models have been drawing a large attendance and have been receiving an enthusiastic reception from the public.

That Two-By-Four Isn't Two-By-Four

A two-by-four isn't really a two-by-four — as you well know if you have ever bought one.

By the time it reaches you, after being dressed (surfaced) at the mill, a two-by-four is down to something like 1⅝ inches by 3⅝ inches.

It's the "something like" that is causing all the trouble. While the present standards call for uniform sizes at the time the lumber is dressed, dimensional variations occur later on, depending on how dry or how green the lumber was when it left the mill. Thus, a two-by-four purchased by you may not be exactly the same size as the two-by-four purchased by your neighbor, or even the same size as another two-by-four purchased by you.

The more water in the wood, the more shrinkage will take place.

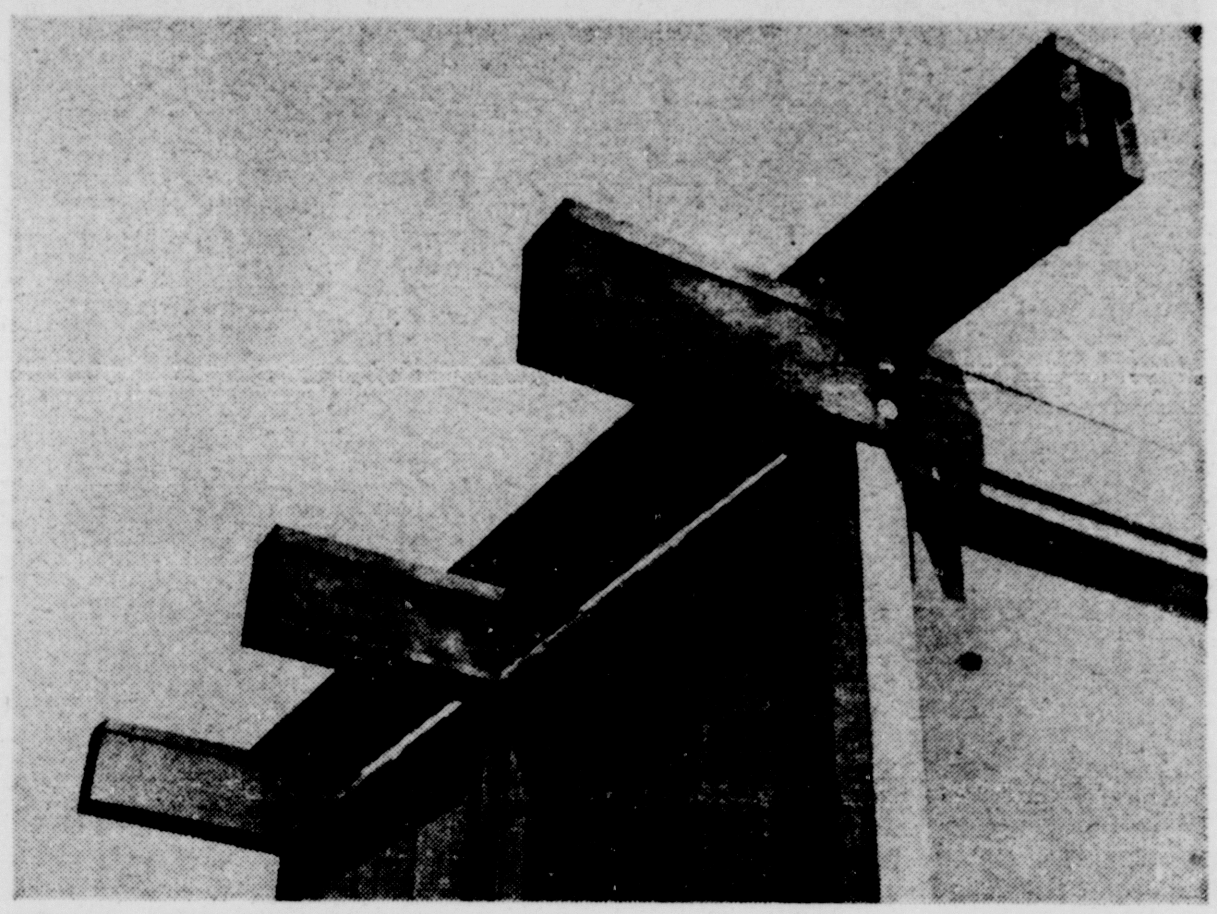
Green lumber is generally considered to be that which has a moisture content of 30 per cent or more. Dry lumber usually refers to that with a moisure content of 19 per cent or less.

Because green lumber shrinks in transit or shortly after being nailed in place, the two end up different sizes by the time they see service as studs, joists, rafters or other supporting members.

Under a proposal by the American Lumber Standards Committee of the Department of Commerce, a piece of softwood lumber would have to be a specific size at a specific moisture content. That means green and dry lumber would be surfaced to different sizes at the mill so that, as nearly as possible, they would be the same size after application in construction.

Two members of the 15-man committee are against any change, saying that it would give owners of vast areas of private timber an "unconscionable windfall."

In any case, the National Bureau of Standards has mailed out ballots to more than 21,000 lumbermen, architects, builders, specifiers and related groups to find out their opinions on the proposed changes. The results of the survey will be disclosed this summer.



NOTCHED AND BOLTED double two-by-eight beams give rigidity to the poolhouse created by industrial designer James H. Crate. Lights concealed in the beam recesses provide low level illumination at night. Siding is V-groove tongue and groove redwood, front screen is vinyl coated fiberglass. All hardware is brass or hot-dipped galvanized to prevent stains.

FOR STORAGE

Lazy Susan Closet Easy Do-It-Yourself Project

To help solve the storage problems plaguing most families today, an illustrated plan has been created for building a practical lazy susan wardrobe closet.

This unusual closet, revolving to provide neat and orderly storage with easy access to more than three times the amount of clothing held by a normal closet, can be built by the average do-it-yourselfer using only a few basic tools.

The closet is designed with three compartments for hanging clothing, each with an overhead shelf, and three full-length compartments with shelves and bins for hats, shoes, sweaters, lingerie and other accessories. It covers an area six feet square and is intended for a corner of a bedroom, foyer or hallway.

Complete step-by-step instructions for building the closet are given in the new illustrated plan, "A Practical Lazy Susan Wardrobe," which can be obtained by sending 25 cents to cover printing and handling to "Practical Lazy Susan," American Home Improvement Institute, 342 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.

THEY MAY BE called dwarfs, but they are truly giants of color. These dwarf dahlias are a massed display of bright, big blooms, and a real conversation piece.

Delightful Dwarfs

Gardening Page

The Bedding Plant Growers Assn. assures you that while these dahlias are the brightest and showiest of all ornamentals, they are also the easiest to grow.

If you want to really do justice to Dwarf Unwin Dahlias, give them a bed all their own and don't skimp on cutting for indoor displays.

NOW THIS might sound like you need the large flowers of 10 to 12 inches across. Well, if you like — but if your garden and home demand a smaller variety, Dwarf Unwin Dahlias are glad to oblige.

When you cut dahlias (and be sure you do, they are unsurpassed for home enjoyment), do so when the buds have opened completely. Do not cut them right after watering or during the heat of the day.

For summer's most reliable streaks of blue, plant the Lobelia. This low-growing plant can be compact or trailing with varying shades of foliage. The blooms themselves come in several shades of blue and are the perfect compliment with your dahlias. Being one of the most versatile of the bedding plants, the Lobelia can be used in edgings, , groundcovers, pots, hanging baskets, and window boxes.

PORTULACA (Moss Rose) is another summer dazzler. Six inches in height and spreading to 12 inches in width, this groundcover is now available in flats. Resembling full-blown roses or cactus blossoms, they come in a mixture of pink, rose, lavender, orange, red, white and pastel shades.

Any type of soil and full sun is fine for the growing of these interesting plants. They are ideal for any spot needing quick color.

As with all bedding plants, dahlias, Lobelia and Portulaca (Moss Rose) are available now in flats. Plant them as soon as possible and be generous. The more you plant, the greater the delight when you see their vibrant color.

A Beauty From Down Under

You may never brew tea from the leaves of the Australian Tea Tree, as it's rumored Captain Cook did at one time.

What's more, it's doubtful that you'll miss it. Particularly when you realize what a yeoman job this fine tree does throughout Northern California.

IT'S A SPECIALIST at tough jobs such as holding a shifty, sandy soil or quelling a salty wind.

When Golden Gate Park was started in San Francisco and it was all sand dunes and sea wind, one of the first things planted to control both was the Australian Tea Tree. You'll find them going strong there today — topped in the spring with a cloud of tiny white blossoms.

Actually, the tea tree can be had in sizes that grow to anywhere from five feet . . . a good-looking shrub . . . to a handsome 40-foot tree. It's a good idea to check with your nurseryman.

ONE THING especially endears the tea tree to the Marin gardener. It lends itself so nicely to the informal garden. Each specimen is truly an individual in itself. When allowed to spread out, the branches twist themselves into interesting gnarled patterns.

You can encourage this twisting tendency, as many of us do, or discourage it if you like more discipline in your growing things.

Because they are fast growing, the tea trees make excellent windbreaks. It might be pointed out that just because these shrubs or trees will take a lot of punishment does not mean they won't perform happily under less trying conditions. They are indeed very pleasant used as foundation plants, specimens or alternated along a wall with climbing roses. No wonder Californians have adopted this import from Down Under.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- With warmer weather to come, don't spare the mulch. A layer of two to three inches of peat moss, manure, wood shavings or bark around the base of shrubs and prized plants will conserve moisture.
- To keep your blooming plants at their best for the longest time, pick off faded blooms.
- For quick and easy summer color, consider the dwarf dahlias. Check with your local nursery for seedlings in nursery flats.
- Remember, fuchsias and camellias thrive on overhead spraying—especially when the weather is warm.
- For best results, keep your lawn care on a schedule. Fertilize lightly and often; water deeply and infrequently rather than often and lightly.

Some Good Plants For The Tropical Effect In Marin

One of the several plants from South Africa that has taken kindly to Marin gardens is the Strelitzia, sometimes called "Bird of Paradise." The purplish flower bracts are borne on stiff two to three foot stems and enclose blue and gold flowers. The bird-like effect of the flower is the key to its common name When cut, they will last for days.

STRELITZIA is described botanically as a perennial, but it is treated in the garden just like a woody plant. The roots are fleshy and spreading, giving rise to leaves resembling banana plants, although stiffer and more wind-resistant.

Acres of Strelitzia are grown in Southern California just for the flowers, which are easy to ship, easy to handle and arrange themselves willing to adapt to modern interiors. In the garden, they are set in the sunniest situation available. Here, they are often grown in tubs and boxes although they can be grown here in the earth if they are planted so as to be sheltered somewhat from frost.

Besides the well-known Strelitzia reginae, with the spectacular blue and gold flowers, there is a strong, robust variety called Strelitzia nicolai. Nicol's Strelitzia can be as large as 15 feet tall. The foliage is broad and long and the flowers are blue and white. Give it room — the plants become massive!

A GOOD companion plant to the Strelitzia is Abyssinian Banana. This variety does not produce edible fruit, but it is highly ornamental and the hardiest of the banana group. You have noticed its broad leaf blades with a reddish mid-rib. It does best where there is some protection from high winds.

There is a purplish-tinged leaf form of the Abyssinian Banana called "redleaf." It is useful for foliage contrast to an oversupply of greens; looks fine in front of light backgrounds. Like the green form, it needs wind and frost protection.

A good leafy perennial to use in the shade for tropical effect is Acanthus, with the unlikely common name of "bearsbreech." The huge leaves are handsomely cut, and the current favorite is called "oakleaf."

Acanthus becomes spectacular in June, when the four-foot spikes carry rosy purple flowers through July.

SOON AS the flowers fade, the entire plant should be cut down. New foliage appears immediately and by the end of the growing season you will have a brand new, handsome plant.

To suggest that a Philodendron be planted outdoors may sound a little queer, but certain non-climbing shrub forms of this favorite indoor subject are quite hardy. Best known is Philodendron selloum (rhymes with saloon). Massive leaves are artistically cut with wavy-edged margins.

In addition to taking an outdoor situation, the shrub Philodendron can take quite a bit of sun. The foliage color may be a little lighter than when the planting situation provides some shade.

THE MOARIS of New Zealand have a plant they call "flax" which in no way resembles any of the flax you ever saw. The stiff blades are in massive clumps and may be either plain green, green and gold, light bronze or reddish bronze. By soaking the blades and pounding them almost to pulp, it would be possible to make a coarse thread of sorts. However, the Phormiums' desirability is for their ornament and not for the fibre they provide.

Meredith Willson's Surprise

Most television stars want to blurt the news of their shows as loudly as the public prints will permit.

Not so Meredith Willson. Rehearsals for his first "Texaco Star Parade" show to be seen Thursday at 10 p.m. on KPIX-TV are being held behind locked doors in Hollywood.

"We're not exactly demanding loyalty oaths from our cast and crew. But we're not encouraging blabbermouths either," Willson smiled.

THE REASON for the closed door policy is due to a special number Willson has written for the show.

"It doesn't even have a name," he says. "We call it 'The Utterance.' All I will tell you is that it's a new secret marching song that runs almost five minutes and we're going to open the show with it. Beyond that, wild horses can't drag the story from me!"

Wild horses weren't required to learn, however, that the idea for this super-secret "Utterance" was suggested by Willson's partner in the music publishing field, the well-known composer Frank Loesser.

"IT WAS a very simple idea. But about a day after I'd started trying to write it, I immediately understood why no one else had gotten the same idea, or had completed it—it was that difficult to write. It is also easily stolen, and that's the primary reason for our sealed lips," explains Willson.

He will, and does, talk about the guests on this, his first in a series of summer specials for "Texaco Star Parade."

"My wife Rini, of course, will be on this first show, and we'll mingle her Russian accent with the Italian accents of two other guest stars — Caterina Valente and Sergio Franchi."

"I will, naturally, be speaking my plain Mason City, Iowa, brand of American-ese, as will the '40 Young Americans,' that marvelous singing group of high school and college students from here in Los Angeles," says Willson.

The Resilience Of Young Couples

By Rev.
ROBERT N. RODENMAYER
Executive Secretary,
Division of Christian Ministry,
National Council of the Episcopal Church

Early marriage is here to stay. The current pattern seems to be for girls to become brides at eighteen when they marry boys of twenty. This means that the bride could become a grandmother by the time she is in her late thirties, and the groom a grandfather at forty.

There was a time when it was not considered proper for a young man to propose until he had a steady job and $1,000 in the bank. Now young people marry while they are still in school, frequently with nothing in the bank, and often with educational debt in the background. The phenomenon of working wives supporting husbands in graduate schools of all kinds has become so common as to be a norm.

In many such marriages there are times of strain when there are more bills than money to pay them with, when one needs to go out on the town and can't afford it. Tempers get frayed, and one seems hemmed in by a routine from which there is little prospect of escape. Sometimes young people get caught in the trap of living in the future, thinking of those fine things they are going to do someday when this stage is over, and losing the present moment, which is all there ever is.

On the other hand, married couples sometimes look back on their orange-crate days as among the happiest they knew. When the dinner out did happen, or an interesting movie, or an evening at the theatre, it became a memorable event. And the long drill of nights and days till that bar exam is passed, or the degree won, or the job established, can be a real achievement — something they did together.

Youth has a resilience which is itself a resource. The inconvenient apartment can be lived through, even merrily. The necessary adjustment of two people to a new living arrangement can be an adventure in faith. It needs four things: respect, tenderness, agreement on important matters, and humor.

Respect is the garden in which love grows. It means that this man and this woman care about each other as whole persons, not as reflections. There is a lot of difference between loving yourself in another person's presence: It means some acceptance of responsibility for another person's growing room.

Tenderness is the coinage of the heart. Married couples are lovers before they are anything else. Hopefully, they will remain lovers and will grow in it. It is the language of privacy, of understanding and support, in which the love is nourished. We need to respect each other's privacy, and to deal tenderly with each other's dreams.

Agreement on important things means that they stand on a common footing as they look together at the world around them. This common ground will have to do with beliefs and commitments, with how these people spend their money and their time. Differences of opinion can be welcomed as long as the people holding them welcome each other.

Humor means seeing ourselves in scale, and we are all just a little ridiculous. It helps when married couples think some of the same things are funny. For grown-up people of any age humor is both a form of life insurance and a saving grace. A famous doctor used to prescribe: Keep loving and limber and a little bit loony. The sanity of love is the world's best remedy for the world's worst troubles.

(Dr. Rodenmayer is the author of the book titled "I John Take Thee Mary," published in 1962 by Seabury Press)

Small Differences Can Mar First Days Of Marriage

Sociologists who have researched the happiness stories of hundreds of married couples point to similarity of background as a key to marital smooth sailing.

But in the early days of marriage, it's very likely that the small differences not the larger attitudes in daily living, that come as a surprise.

DAY PEOPLE, who greet the dawn with shirps of joy, find themselves married to night people, who groan with pain when the alarm goes off, and are chipper beyond belief for the late show.

Punctual people are tied for life to non-clock-watchers.

But we must admit, these differences need not rock the marital boat. They may cause a few early ripples of surprise, but after all, you wouldn't want to be married to someone exactly like you, would you?

The absent-minded one, who can't find her glasses—or car keys or the dog's leash or the shopping list — is matched to an inexorable remember-er, who can't see why others forget.

Spontaneous men of the clap-you-on-the-back variety arrive on the home threshold with a pair of unannounced guests, to the despair of their wives.

Avoid The Role Of 'Martyr'

Working Wife Shouldn't Feel She Sacrifices

Does the young woman who is to combine matrimony with studies or a job—or often all three—need to possess any magical qualities of personality to insure a happy marriage?

Sanford N. Sherman, associate executive director of Jewish Family Service in New York City, thinks there are some important ingredients which if lacking, may mean trouble ahead.

Beware, he warns, if the bride-to-be on contemplating the demands soon to be put upon her, should feel herself making a "noble sacrifice." If even for a bit, she feels she will play the martyr to help her husband, it's time to have a talk with her fiance about her attitude.

On the positive side, Sherman feels it's essential that the bride-to-be be emotionally free from her parents. If she's the type to phone mother daily, or to ask her parents' advice rather than consulting with her future husband, she will not be able to handle the many decisions she must make as a married woman. She's not grown-up enough for marriage.

Sherman says too that the young bride with strong career plans should be sure that her role in the marriage is complementary rather than competitive. Her ambitions must interlace with her husband's rather than rivaling his.

Really A 'Groom'

The "groom" was just that in some places long ago. It was the custom for the husband-to-be to wait on the bride's table as groom or servant.

MIX-AHEAD meat loaf teams up with a quickie vegetable scallop dish for an easy supper. The upside-down cake can be prepared in advance, too.

Easy On The Budget—

Casseroles Are Tasty Eating, Too

Hurry-up meals are a necessity for the young bride who is breadwinner as well as cake-maker.

And contrary to popular belief, these quickie menus do not have to cut deeply into the food budget or be uninteresting fare.

Some prior thought is necessary to make such menus attractive, but the thinking can take place while the breakfast dishes are being washed, or on the bus trip home from the office.

Many last-minute meals can be prepared a few days in advance, and housed in refrigerator or freezer till needed.

Texas-style casserole; Start with a can of chili con carne (or two, depending on the number of hungry people). Lightly grease a casserole. Make layers of the following ingredients—from bottom to top, in the order of their appearance: chili; a sprinkling of dried minced or flaked onion (fresh or frozen chopped may be used, of course); another sprinkling of chopped green bell pepper; corn chips, a well-covering layer but not overly thick — an excessive amount absorbs too much moisture from chili; grated, or small pieces, sharp yellow cheese. Repeat this sequence of layers and dot the top with butter or margarine. Bake in moderate oven until heated well through, about a half hour, or until cheese is bubbling and beginning to brown.

Noodle casserole: In a mixing bowl put cooked noodles, measuring about cup before cooking; sprinkle with salt, pepper, a rounded tablespoon well; put into greased casserole; top with cracker or bread crumbs dotted with margar- of flour, a tablespoon of dried minced onion, and about a quarter teaspoon of thyme; add link sausages cut crosswise in small pieces (four will do but more can be used); stir; pour over all a cup and a half of milk and two tablespoons of vegetable oil; mix ine or butter; splash about a third cup of milk over the top. Bake in moderate oven until bubbly and beginning to grown, 20 to 30 minutes. The twisted noodles are nice for this — or elbow macaroni. Leftover meat cut in small pieces may be used in place of sausages. With beef, substitute basil for thyme and with lamb, use rosemary.

Corned beef special: In a mixing bowl, combine hash, three-quarters cup of milk, about a tablespoon of steak sauce (more if you like it hot), two tablespoons ketchup or chili sauce, a tablespoon of minced onion if desired (there is some in the hash already), a quarter teaspoon of basil or marjoram—or try a healthy pinch of both. Mix well. Place in greased casserole. Top with generous layer of bread or cracker crumbs and dot with margarine or butter. Sneak a layer of your favorite cheese under the crumbs if you like. Bake in moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes or until top is crusty and bubbly.

Hamburger special: Season a pound of meat with salt, pepper, a quarter-teaspoon of the herb of your choice (basil, marjoram, oragano), a tablespoon of steak sauce; stir in one egg and a half cup of canned combination vegetable juices or tomato juice. Mix well. Press a little less than half of the meat mixture into oblong or circle shape approximately a half inch thick in a lightly greased baking pan. Mix a package of prepared stuffing according to directions—stirr in an egg, one tablespoon minced onion, one teaspoon celery seed or two teaspoons dried celery flakes. Add more water if you like a moist stuffing. Spread stuffing on meat in the pan. (With two pounds of meat use the entire package. With one pound bake remaining stuffing in a small casserole.

Pat out remaining meat mixture and place over top of stuffing. Seal top layer of meat to bottom by pinching with fingers around edges. Pour more of the vegetable juice over all and bake in moderate oven about forty-five minutes or until meat is brown. For a touch of color and tastiness, sliced tomatoes, thinly sliced dill pickles, or sliced onion circles (or a combination of any of these) can be placed across the top of the stuffing before sealing with top layer of meat. Tomatoes, pickles, or onions can be sealed inside layers of meat without any stuffing at all. Either way this dish provides a surprise.

The Casual Crowd Is Fun

No matter how spacious nor how cramped the newlyweds' first quarters may be, there's always room for casual entertaining.

No guests expect formality from an inexperienced cook. They're more interested in the friendliness of the gathering, rather than the elaborateness of the menu.

WHETHER A meal is sit-down or serve-yourself, it can and should be done with ease.

Slick up the house ahead of time. Double check ash trays, lighters, matches, guest towels. Score pads, and pencils if games are involved. Check table linens, silver, glassware, dishes, and serving pieces. Set the table. If the meal is buffet, take a quick look around for comfortable eating spots. Some people find it hard to balance food on laps. Card tables, TV trays can be set up by the man of the house at the last minute. A coffee table may easily accommodate three diners. Any flat surface, even a stool or hassock, may be used as a dining spot, with a pillow on the floor as seat.

Incidentally, floor pillows as such are a great help in a small establishment.

It should not strike the young hostess with horror when suggested that a delightful and ample meal can consist of casserole, salad, dessert, beverage—and nothing else. She will find it done every day, without apology, by her more experienced fellow housewives.

WHEN entertaining, plan menus which do not require last minute mixings and whippings—or, in short, a frenzied hostess in the kitchen just before mealtime. Another old piece of advice bears repeating. Never serve an untried or new dish to guests. Experimentation and perfecting should be strictly for home consumption. There is nothing which makes for a more serene hostess like the confidence inspired by serving tried and true dishes.

Often that old bug-bear, the budget, lifts a cautioning finger in the area of extra people for meals. Jane, Mary, and Sue with spouses Tom, Dick, and Harry enjoy getting together but all must keep a wary eye on the entertainment fund. There is no need to forego this plasure. If Jane is the home hostess, she can supply the hot dish and beverage. Sue and Mary can bring salad, dessert, bread, and relish tray.

Impromptu get-togethers are always fun.

ONE GROUP of six young married couples were reluctant to break up the gathering after a football game. No attempt at planning a meal was made. Each couple brought what was available in their kitchen or what had been planned for their meal. When they reassembled at one of the homes, there was a tuna casserole, gelatin salad mold, hamburgers, frankfurters, rolls, crackers, olives, pickles, celery, sardines, a meat loaf, cheeses, potato and corn chips, cookies, cake. Before they knew it, a small scale smorgasbord had developed.

This type of social gathering can become a way of life for busy young couples. The food and the company are good. The budget stands firm.

It's Candids And Color

So reports Frederick Quellmalz, executive manager of the Professional Photographers of America, Inc.

"About the only formal shot today's bride wants is one of the wedding party or herself and husband," he says. "This is the one that usually is framed and goes on the mantlepiece or piano in the new home."

Wedding Trip Needn't Be Costly

Couples whose finances are so tightly budgeted that there's no margin for extras may feel that vacations for them are out of the question.

While they naturally haven't funds for a week at a high-powered resort, they can still take a holiday junket for little more than the price of gasoline.

To them are available the camping facilities of national parks, ranging from spectacular Olympia in the state of Washington to the moss-hung paths of the Everglades in Florida.

Add to these an ever-increasing number of state and county parks being opened each year, and an interesting vacation becomes a reality even without ever leaving your home state.

Camping facilities vary from tent floors which can be rented for a few cents per night to scenic log cabins with housekeeping facilities which rent for a very few dollars.

New Creations In Wedding Fashions Flatter Mothers

Designers Now Provide More Interesting Dress

Creators of wedding fashions have come to the rescue of that sometimes desperate woman, the mother of bride or groom.

Destined, in years past to find nothing more interesting to wear at the wedding than ecru lace, she now can be seen in the forefront of fashion.

"Beige has been done to death," says one sympathetic designer, "though sometimes it can be combined with offbeat colors."

HE HAS been busily creating long gowns for mothers very much in keeping with the bride's own gown. Fabrics may be identical, with mother wearing a light turquoise linen dress, and daughter in the traditional white, also linen.

Another designer, sympathetic to mothers and even grandmothers, has a full line of long dresses. Some have boleros, or mock jackets. Fabrics are silk linen shantung, or silk and acetate blends. Colors may be springtime pastels, or strong shades.

FOR GRANDMOTHER, he has long gowns of softly-draped chiffon. One style has a bolero jacket with attached back panel for softness. Cap sleeves prevail. Often beaded trim of pearls and crystal, dyed to match the gown, is used for a waistband and for neck ornamentation. Royal blue, purple and lavender are favorites for grandmother.

If a short dress is preferred, some designers offer a street-length gown with a simulated bolero, lifted above the dress' banded waistline. There's just the suggestion of a sleeve. Swiss embroidery on net or organza are favorites.

Photographer Offers His Advice On That All-Important Portrait

This appointment with a photographer is a bit different from the yearbook-type of picture taking, where black or white velvet drapes and the inevitable string of pearls were your only accents.

ACCORDING to John Howell, a master photographer of Winnetka, Ill., there are three elements that guarantee the perfection of a wedding photography: The trend toward natural, rather than stereotyped portraits; vast advances in photographic techniques, and today's high-fashion wedding gowns, designed for elegance.

But even with all these assurances that the bridal photographs will be beautiful, Howell emphasizes that portrait-sitting can't be accomplished in a last-minute rush.

It takes time for the photographer to arrange lights that capture depth, to balance light against shadow, to show the fabric of the gown, to decide on the facial angle which is most attractive.

SO HOWELL recommends that an appointment for a sitting be made as soon as the wedding gown is ready, and well before the bride is caught up in the inevitable party-ing.

Be sure your bridal shoes have fashion-pointed toes, since the shoes may very well show.

And in the make-up department, use a liquid base nearest your skin tone. Keep brows arched naturally, have a clean lipstick line, perhaps enlarging it a bit if your lips are thin, and don't forget mascara, lightly done, to emphasize your eyes under the bright lights.

CAREFUL ATTENTION to detail is important when a wedding photograph is being taken, so both gown and wearer will look their best. Here the photographer takes time to adjust the bride's veil.

Here's Timetable For Planning The Wedding Rites

You Should Start Arrangements Months Ahead Of The Big Date

If you are planning a large formal wedding for June and you are not already well along with your planning, then you're in trouble. On the other hand, here's a suggested timetable if the vows are to be exchanged later in the year. Or if there is a second daughter in the family who will be a bride in some future June:

THREE MONTHS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Decide on the type, size, location, and time of day for the wedding.

Invite the members of your wedding party, with due regard to their commitments to studies or job.

Call on your clergyman with your fiance to set the wedding date. This also gives the clergyman an opportunity to counsel with you. After this visit, the church secretary will reserve the church, organist and sexton for the occasion.

Draw up your guest list, and decide which guests will be invited also to the reception if you plan to limit this group. This is not a solo venture, since you will have your fiance's list as well, distant relatives to consider, and painful moments as you shift individual names to second priority.

Decide where the reception will be held, and what the menu and other arrangements will be. Since the bride's family pays for the reception, it is imperative that the family's financial circumstances govern the elaborateness of the reception.

Choose your wedding dress. This decision is made easier if you consult bridal house advertisements in advance to get some ideas of style and price.

Order your invitations and personal stationery, bearing your future name. Informals are invaluable, carrying either your married name or monogram.

Begin to choose patterns for china, silver and glass, and register them in the gift registry of your store. This is a less commercial move than it appears, for gift givers want to present you with something compatible with your tastes, and prefer you give some indication.

As soon as you have chosen your new home, make up a floor plan to carry with you when you go furniture and rug shopping. Be sure to include height of ceilings as well as other dimensitions. Many of today's furnishings stores have free interior decorating services which can advise you. Don't hesitate to take advantage of them, for they are usually practical, rather than fanciful.

Begin your trousseau shopping.

Suggest both mothers shop for their gowns, which should not only be harmonious to each other, but should blend with your color scheme for the bridal party.

TWO MONTHS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Select gifts for your attendants.

Continue the other activities begun a month ago which are so time-consuming.

Go with your groom to get the marriage license.

ONE MONTH BEFORE THE WEDDING

Have the final fitting on your gown.

Mail your invitations, and prepare a check list as reception acceptances arrive. Give the caterer a general idea of the number of guests expected.

Arrange for moving your belongings and gifts to your new home.

Make arrangements for a luncheon for your bridesmaids and a rehearsal dinner. The entire wedding party plus both sets of parents will be included in the latter.

TWO WEEKS BEFORE THE WEDDING

Write thank-you notes.

Arrange a seating plan for reception guests. If you plan to have a bride's table, write out place cards. The parents may sit at the bride's table with the wedding party, or may have a separate table.

Send wedding announcement and glossy photograph to the newspapers.

ONE WEEK BEFORE THE WEDDING

Give caterer the final figure on reception guests.

Ask a friend to be on hand for last-minute telephone calls and wires, and expedite the reception.

Rehearse your wedding ceremony, so all will go smoothly.

YOUR WEDDING DAY

This is a day in which to forget all about the detailed arrangements you've been working on for months. Let someone else worry about last-minute changes, and be your happiest and most glowing.

The Busy Mother Has Many Roles

Behind every beautiful, well-run wedding stands an efficient, and often unsung, heroine—the mother of the bride.

These days, it seems that she has more than ever to do, and her roles from the time the engagement is announced until the big day is over are many and varied.

She is a shopping consultant in the early stages of the wedding plans. Many a bride-to-be relies upon her mother's experience and taste for help in choosing the wedding gown and the trousseau. Table appointments, too, will be subject to that omnipresent: "What do you think, Mother?"

Bridal consultants say that, while the bride very definitely selects her own sterling pattern, her mother frequently accompanies her when she makes her choice. According to tradition, the bride's wedding gift from her parents is sterling flatware, so mother's interest may be two-fold in this case.

Sometimes, the bride's mother's advice is sought even about furniture for the this is the area where the bride and groom are most likely to act independently, according to bridal consultants.

She is chief arrangement maker. While most brides play an active part in making wedding and reception arrangements, it is actually the mother's responsibility to see that everything is done as it should be, and in time. This means checking and double-checking with caterer, florist, musicians, photographer—all those professional helpers who are available nowadays to make a wedding run smoothly.

She is a party giver extraordinaire. Whether it's a large party to announce the engagement or a small luncheon for the wedding party, pre-wedding entertaining is an important part of the festivities. Since it is up to the bride's mother to welcome the groom's family into her circle, she may decide to give a very special dinner for the groom's parents. Such a gesture adds to her already heavy schedule—but it can pave the way for a happy relationship for all.

She is a gift coordinator. It is the bride's mother who will be asked what the bride wants as wedding gifts, and she is in a position to suggest tactfully the right things to the right people. For example, a hint to close friends and relatives that the bride wants sterling may help her succeed in acquiring a complete set.

As gift coordinator, Mother is responsible for any display of wedding gifts, including attractive arrangement of the gift and proper labeling as to donor. And, it is she who is usually on the scene when gifts arrive, and can help her daughter label and record them, to make acknowledgement easier.

THE BRIDE'S MOTHER helps keep a record of gifts received—and she is often the gift consultant who tactfully encourages close relatives and friends to complete the bride's set of fine table appointments, such as her sterling flatware.

She may also find it necessary to do a little prodding to get the busy bride-to-be to write thank you notes promptly.

She is official hostess. At the wedding itself, it is the bride's mother who sees that guests are seated according to any pre-arranged plan, and at the reception, she is responsible for every aspect of party-giving — from the way the table looks to the way the food tastes. As at any party, as hostess, she places her guests' welfare first, and does her best to see that everyone has a good time.

Budget Is Matter Of Trial And Error

Working out a budget for sound financial living often seems to be a formidable task which can result in friction, if not downright quarreling between the new bride and groom.

But when it comes to the more ticklish matter of deciding where to enter certain spending, there's need for a flexible approach to budgeting, and above all, a definition of terms.

IS DINNER out, or a dinner party at home, to be charged to food, or to entertainment? What does the personal allowance fund mean? Newspapers, cigarettes, or lunch on the job?

Where to put what isn't nearly as important as mutual agreement on the situation.

Next step is to rough up your budget under as few headings as possible. Banking authorities agree that if you have more than seven or eight headings, your budgeting will probably break down from the strain.

"HOUSING" can mean rent or mortgage payments, repair allowances, heat, light, and all the elements involved in operating a home.

"Clothing" can be a lump heading for clothes for both husband and wife, and can also include dry cleaning, any laundry done outside the home, shoe repairs, and the like.

"Entertainment" will cover movies, dinners out, and the usual forms of relaxation, but but you may wish to broaden the term to include a sum set aside for a vacation, equipment for any sports activities and hobbies.

IT WILL TAKE a bit of trial and error bookkeeping before the budget allocations for a newly-married couple are made smoothly. After all, their past experience has been as single people, and many times, still under the parental roof without any worries over things like mortgages.

But after several months of money management, the couple can work from actual budgeting to forward looking estimates of expenditures, and the budget then becomes more realistic.

Muff And Parasol

In some places, the floral muff and the floral-trimmed parasol are replacing more classic attendants' bouquets.

The Kitchen Shower Is Certain To Please Any Young Bride

To give her a big gift, a dozen friends can each contribute a few dollars toward it. In addition, each guest can bring a small kitchen tool as an extra present.

This way the bride will have the fun of opening a lot of packages and her kitchen will be stocked with some extremely useful aids to good cooking.

TOASTER — Our choice would be one that both toasts and bakes; it's streamlined and doesn't take up too much space. The bride can bake a meat loaf, casserole dish or dessert in it, and she'll use it endlessly for reheating foods. These toaster-ovens are also perfect for English muffins, biscuits, rolls and brown-and-serve breads.

SKILLET — The temperature dial on this modern utensil can take the guesswork out of some of the bride's cooking. Electric skillets can be put to many uses and are attractive to serve from.

BLENDER—The groom as well as the bride will enjoy using this appliance for mixing drinks and many kinds of food preparation. A coffee grinder and ice crusher are blender auxiliaries that the bride might acquire later.

COFFEE MAKER—This handsome appliance will be wonderfully useful when the bride entertains.

Rubber and metal spatulas come with wide and narrow blades; one of each width, two rubber and two metal, would make a fine gift. Once the bride starts using these she'll know she can't get along without them in many steps of food preparation.

Kitchen shears are likely to be used constantly by the bride. The sort that look like ordinary scissors (without a spring at the handle) are easiest to handle and do everything from mincing parsley to quartering a duck.

A little whirl-type beater that can whip up an egg or as little as a quarter cup of cream is perfect for twosome cooking.

A small ceramic mortar and pestle that may be used for crushing both garlic and herbs is easier to clean than a garlic press. These mortar and pestles are available at pharmaceutical supply houses and some specialty houseware shops. As a go-along, a bride would probably appreciate a miniature French lettuce basket in which to store garlic.

Ice cream scoops. A bride might be presented with a small and large size. There's also an up-to-date shovel-type scoop with which the bride (or the groom) could remove hard-frozen ice cream without really trying.

A set of wooden mixing spoons. The bowls of these come in various sizes, and the handles in various lengths.

Measuring cups and spoons. Supply a set of metal measuser (¼, ⅓, ½ and 1 cup) for dry ingredients. Also a one-pint glass measure for liquids. A set of metal measuring spoons (¼, ½ and 1 teaspoon plus 1 tablespoon) come with short or long handles and may be hung.

Pastry set. A pastry cloth, sometimes called a canvas, and a rolling-pin cover come together; to start the bride off right, add a ballbearing rolling pin

Kitchen timer. Even if there's a timer on the bride's kitchen range, an extra one will be useful.

Refrigerator dishes. The bride will probably never have too many of these. They come in various sizes in sturdy glass or plastic or luxurious stainless steel.

Saucepans and skillets may be had together in starter sets. If saucepans are bought individually, remember that 1 quart and 3 quart size are those often recommended for a bride. Deep skillets with tightly fitting covers are extremely useful and the 8 and 10-inch sizes are good for a bride.

Cake pans. Two 8 and two 9 inch round layer-cake pans will be perfect for the bride's home-made-from-scratch and cake-mix cakes. Two square cake pans, one 8 and one 9 inches, will also prove endlessly useful.

Muffin pans. Choose two nesting six-cup pans rather than one 12-cup pan. Paper cupcake pan liners come in colors and can be tucked in with this gift.

Pie plate. A 9-inch size is a good choice; if it is of ovenproof glass it can be brought to the table. Six ovenproof glass custard cups that can be used for baking and for molding gelatin dishes could accompany the pie plate.

Souffle dish. If the bride is interested in French cooking, she would appreciate a traditional white pottery souffle dish with straight sides. The size could be 1 or 1½ quart.

Gold Jewelry Gift Answer

The big fashion gold strike has brought on a landslide of dramatic new designs in necklaces, earrings and pins the like of which has not been seen since the days of King Midas.

Gold jewelry is the top costume accent of the year. Real gold jewelry may be 14 or 18 karat, and priced accordingly. But whatever its karat value, real gold jewelry has an age-old appeal and a lifetime appreciation.

Ritual Of The Ring Has Ancient Roots

"With this ring I thee wed . . ."

In hundreds of thousands of ceremonies across the country, in cathedrals, chapels and homes, there comes the moment when the wedding ring, slipped on the bride's third finger by the groom, symbolizes both the ritualistic and the contractural meaning of marriage.

The wedding ring has had a long and honored history, since the days when the ancient Hebrews fashioned wedding rings of gold, filigreed and richly engraved. Representations of important moments in Jewish history were painstakingly carved on the rings.

AT THE TIME of the Roman Empire, wedding rings were first made of iron, gold being reserved for official ceremonial occasions. Later the rings were gold, and because gold is easily inscribed, they were often beautifully decorated with the groom's seal, or with some inscription to the bride, or possibly to one of the gods.

Sanctioned by both church and civil ceremonies, the wedding ring became a part of the entire marriage ritual which was almost unchanged from Roman times to the 11th century.

The advent of Christianity tended to ritualize the wedding ring's use and materials. Only gold was thought valuable enough, and the third finger of the left hand was designated as the proper place.

WEDDING bands varied in style through the centuries. When Prince Albert married Victoria, he put on her hand a golden ring fashioned as a snake, composed of 14 hinged joints, 12 of them set with diamonds.

But later in the Victorian era, there was a reaction against the highly ornate, and a general return to the plain gold band.

For the first 50 years of this century, wedding rings remained stereotyped. But in recent years, there has been an upsurge in the jewelry craft to design rings that reflect the tastes and attitudes of today's young people.

Keep Your Diamond Sparkling Bright With Just A Little Care

The sparkle of your diamond engagement ring should be as bright as the sparkle of your smile—and both will be on display all during your wedding reception.

Or you can use a liquid or granulated detergent, preparing hot suds in a cup or bowl. Add a tablespoon of ammonia if the water is hard. While the ring is in the bath, brush gently with an eyebrow brush. Clean back and front of the ring mounting and under and over the diamonds. Don't scrub; it might loosen stones.

Either rinse in a bowl of hot water or transfer the jewelry to a tea strainer and rinse under hot water from the faucet. Pat dry with a soft, lintless cloth or dip the ring out to drain on tissue paper.

And remember, the cleaner the diamond the larger it looks, since the maximum of light can enter and return in sparkles.

It takes very little time or expense to maintain that special sparkle. And the result is well worth the effort.

Silver Belongs

The association of silver with marriage was a natural outgrowth of the change in the manner of acquiring a bride. When men began to buy wives rather than capture them, the price of the wife was often measured in silver coin.

SPARKLING DIAMOND has its glory enhanced by having a minimum amount of metal surrounding it. These unadorned engagement rings rank high in popularity with engaged couples, though jewelry designers are coming up with some dramatic innovations in one-of-a-kind rings.

Fabrics With Stamina

They're A Big Boon To The Young Shopper

When the young bride-to-be goes trousseau shopping, she will find herself in a seventh heaven of wonderful clothes, that, thanks to the wonders of chemistry, will stay fresh on a long car trip, or emerge crisp and neat after a long air flight.

Intermingling raw fabrics with synthetics means a linen suit, with only five per cent flax in the weave, looks like linen, but without pure linen's wrinkling propensities.

Nylon manufacturers continue to improve on their fibers so they're nearly perfect imitations of silk, cotton, and even tweed.

Even pure silk clothes, which use to be so fragile, now have chemical coating added to the fabric, which gives them more body.

Double-knit suits have proved to be so wrinkle-proof that it's not necessary to line the skirt to prevent bagging.

So for a modest investment the young shopper can find clothes with looks and stamina, that will be the basis of her wardrobe for a long time to come.

END OF AN ERA

Look-Alike Brides Are Passe'

There's no such thing today as a traditional bridal gown.

The era of look-alike brides who had no choice but to wear a gown skirted with billowing yards of satin, becoming or not, is over.

Fashion trends have swept triumphantly into the bridal market, and the salon talk is of modified A-lines, built-in sheaths, controlled silhouettes, and all the other terms that lard the conversations of those in the fashion business.

PRISCILLA Kidder, whose major salon is in Boston, emphasizes "chic-looking wedding clothes," and says she introduced the A silhouette into the bridal fashion industry. Her 1964 bridal silhouette will offer a combined look, a fitted look, but with a skirt eased by the agile use of darts.

Designer Christos of Galina says there's no end to the fabrics he can work with in the bridal field. Busy in his workroom finishing a wedding gown of Italian silk linen, simply decorated with rows of balled fringe, he says he uses French and Japanese linen, organza and batiste as well.

COURT TRAINS, swinging regally from the neck of the bridal gown, interest Wallace Sloves, designer for Belle Brides, who feels they are increasingly important. He likes the softened, lifted A-look, and has created gowns with a built-in sheath that can't shift on the wearer.

The empire look that has run rampant through the fashion industry, is just as popular with brides shopping for their gowns, says Antoinette of Embassy. Becoming to all figures, the lifted, above-the-waistline emphasis is flattering, and with just a gentle sweep of the skirt, creates an elongated look for the wedding ceremony.

HER SECOND favorite is the gown that is almost completely straight. It may be of silk organza, with Swiss embroidered lace in dogwood pattern set into bands of satin at neckline and bodice.

Or it may be a dress of sheer simplicity, to show off the inset of real rosepoint lace which Antoinette has acquired.

ORNAMENTATION ON this stately wedding gown is simply tiny rows of balled fringe, so that nothing will distract from the elegance of the Italian silk linen dress.

HOW ONE DESIGNER GETS HER FASHION IDEAS

"I think of her as looking sweet, but not sophisticated, with a perfectly oval face, and a very simple, soft hair style," says the designer. "She is truly the Madonna of the Chair."

So, with this image in mind, Antoinette is constantly looking about, on the subway, along the city streets, at all the people she sees, getting new ideas for gowns.

"IT'S A FEELING you have," explains the bright-eyed woman, who regards sentimentally every wedding dress in her collection. "Something hits you, and you think, 'Wouldn't that be beautiful for a bride?' Perhaps I get an idea from the curve of a suit collar, or from the placement of bows on a dinner dress."

The designer, who has created wedding gowns for the daughters of prominent persons like Nelson Rockefeller, Irving Berlin and Jackie Gleason, feels the favored style is the loose Empire look, with detachable train hooked on at back of raised line.

Variety In Dress For Attendant

BOWS ABOUND, accenting detail at the empire line of a short gown, tipped with fringe on a more tailored belt, or back-bowed for a change of pace.

Fabrics are imaginative, too. In addition to the ever-popular peau de soie, there are rayon chiffons for summertime weddings, cotton failles, silk-faced satins, and various synthetic fibers of interesting weaves.

The Bride Gets Five Costumes In One In This Most Versatile Of Wedding Gowns

THIS ORIGINAL wedding gown designed by Bea Carpenter of Novato and modeled by Shirley Wallace of Novato doesn't have to be packed away in mothballs after the wedding. Above, the complete ensemble.

THEN THE MODEL drops the veil to her shoulders and it becomes a stole. What you have now is an attractive outfit that is perfect for wearing to the opera, the symphony concert or similar affairs.

THE COMPLETE OUTFIT minus the lace jacket, and the versatile gown takes on still another of its facets. What you have now is just the right gown for the dinner-dance or ball. (Photos by Zia Kari)

MINUS THE detachable long skirt, and now Shirley Wallace is wearing a very pretty cover-up dinner or cocktail dress. But the original Bea Carpenter gown still has one more "look" for you to admire.

WITHOUT THE jacket and the long skirt, the former wedding gown has become a breezy bouffant dress that will whirl around the dance floor. Its creator, Bea Carpenter, recently opened the Sew-Sew Shop in Novato.

Take Your Time In Selecting The Pattern For Your Silver

The selection of a silver pattern for your place settings is a procedure that can't be done in a split-second rush.

If your choice is sterling, your selections will undoubtedly last a lifetime. And even plated silverware now has a long life span.

THE DAZZLING designs created by silversmiths range from ornate, repousse handles, to knives and forks with handles so slender and tapering that they are little bigger than a fork tine.

Simplest way to decide among this infinite variety is to choose what is personally appealing to your taste, rather than giving any concern to your future way of life — which doubtless won't be static.

Elaborately curved and ornamented silver takes kindly to meals on a drop-leaf table in a modern apartment. Unadorned silver whose design is based on the severe pewter knives and forks of Puritan days will mix happily with flowered china.

SO THAT you have time to consider the pattern of your choice, send for folders from silversmiths, or pick up a booklet at your favorite store. These you can study at home, eliminating those which do not please you; then, there will be less weighing of choice when you see the pattern in the store.

Decide, too, if you wish the place settings monogrammed, and whether to use a single initial, or three. Advise the store of your selection and choice of monogram, so your friends may add to your silver gifts.

Very much as you would choose a painting because of its appeal, rather than any connisseur's knowledge,

IN MILITARY mood is this white worsted suit with gilt buttons and slightly lengthened jacket. Suit also comes in light and skipper blues, and red.

The Cake-Cutting Procedure

Today, the sword has been replaced by a beribboned knife, but the tradition remains.

The decorated top tier is customarily saved for the bride. The guests may take home a piece of cake wrapped in a napkin, or else individual squares already prepared and boxed.

Tasty Snacks For The Guests

Blend one envelope of onion salad dressing mix with two tablespoons of vinegar. Mix well with three cups each of either finely chopped cooked chicken or shrimp and finely chopped celery, and ¼ cup of coarsely chopped green pepper. Chill two hours to blend flavors. Just before serving, cut shallow pieces from the tops of 72 (one-inch) puffs, fill with chilled salad and replace tops.

The Home Manicure

HAND CARE is a must for the busy young bride, up to her elbows in house and office work. A quick repair job on one scratched nail can be made with a cotton swab dipped in polish remover, without disturbing the polish on the other nails.

Busy fingers that pound typewriter keys by day, wash dishes at night, and on weekends help wallpaper a room, need care to keep their freshness.

You can keep your hands lovely for only a few cents a week, and less than an hour of time, in a good do-it-yourself program that can be handled while you're under your home hair dryer.

To remedy discolored nails professional manicurists use hydrogen peroxide. Get a small bottle at the dime store and, using a cotton swab, remove discolorations.

Then dip fingers in warm, soapy water to soften the cuticle, which then can be pushed back with a swab. Clip hangnails with manicure csissors.

Manicure time is ideal for applying a hand cream, especially in areas where hangnails are likely to develop. Good, too, for incipient cracks in dry fingers.

While the hand cream does its softening job, dip a swab in the peroxide and clean under the nails. Afterward, dry any excess hand cream with a warm towel, and put on nail polish if you wish.

HEALTHY HAIR

Two Minutes Of Your Time Each Day With The Brush

Prescription for shiny, glossy hair: Two minutes of time daily.

That's all it takes to brush your hair 100 strokes, good for both your hair's vitality and pour over-all sense of well-being.

Those who feel sluggish in the morning choose this time for quick hair care, as brushing not only stimulates the scalp, carries oil to the ends of the hair, and makes away with dandruff, but also stimulates nerve cells at the back of the neck.

The complexion benefits, too, for excess oils in the hair, if not corrected, can aggravate many skin disorders. Brisk hair brushing brings a healthy glow to the skin.

Operation Salvage For Charred Pans

Don't throw the pot away when the spinach burns. The charred pan is not hopeless. Sprinkle powdered household cleanser generously over the burned area. Cover with two to three inches of hot water, bring to boil, and simmer for about fifteen minutes. Let stand for another fifteen minutes. Then scrub with steel wool or stainless steel scouring pad.

On Buying Furniture

Here's How To Start Your Decor

Brides are offered so much free advice from well meaning friends, parents and relatives it's a wonder any girl takes that enchanting walk down the aisle.

If everyone's advice on any subject were the same there would be no confusion.

One subject decorators are unanimous on amounts almost to an axiom: If the budget is limited, it is better to buy one or two pieces of good furniture for the first apartment, than to furnish completely with mediocre quality or style.

START WITH a piece or two with which you can build. If possible, choose those first pieces with an eye on their possible double duty capabilities.

One manufacturer has produced a three-drawer unit with so many possible functions it can be many things to many young couples.

Have you ever seen a piece of furniture 96 inches long, only five inches high, with three full-sized drawers? This one is handsome, too. Made of ribbon-striped soft brown mahogany veneer, with drawer fronts paneled with Carpathian elm burl, it is a triumph of the cabinetmaker's art.

IT IS ONE piece of a group called the "Custom Series," and you might think it had been made to order. In the group, equally well made of the same hardwoods, and finely finished, are two bases for the drawer unit. One is a down-to-the-floor base, the other, about six inches high, has eight triangular-shaped feet.

With these two pieces as a start, innumerable functional and handsome groupings can be made, at once, or later, from the drawer and cabinet units in the Custom Series.

For instance, the large three-drawer unit can top a pair of three chests, making a commodious bedroom unit. The three drawers can be placed under a cabinet bar. A variety of other design related units, for use in a dining room, are available.

TALL SLIM cabinets with glass doors may be selected as superstructures to give interest to a long living-room wall.

The elegant design simplicity of the group, enriched by the highlighted mahogany, accented with the textured figure of the elm burl, makes this a group to combine harmoniously with either more pretentious traditional styles or more severe modern pieces.

COMFORTABLE reading corner features small, occasional chairs, a chest that would be at home in any room, a Chinese picnic basket for storage, and the softness of green provided by ferns on the wall.

Clever Accessories One Secret In Home Furnishing

Young brides who in the past have had no more to do with decorating a home than indicating a preference for roses on their bedroom wallpaper are often at a loss when they're furniture shopping for that first apartment.

What important pieces should be purchased? Should top prices be paid for some, and if so, which? Where can the corner-cutting begin?

TO HELP the bewildered buyer, Mrs. Janice Lloyd, consulting home economist who has participated in practical programs of the American Home Economics Assn., makes some suggestions for getting the most for your money.

Try for "see-it-in-your-own home" or "return" privileges to help you avoid costly mistakes. But don't abuse the privileges.

Put more money into those things which are worth the investment because they will last longer and be easier to care for (truly scrubbable wall covering for the kitchen, a really good mattress).

REMEMBER that the value of furnishings drops drastically when they are no longer new. And second-hand furniture sometimes can provide better style, materials and workmanship than inexpensive new pieces (but be sure second-hand upholstered items have been properly cleaned).

Purchase of poor quality workmanship could be a wise decision if the style is good and the item will not receive the kind of wear that would expose its weakness.

Be alert to the decorative possibilities of the inexpensive — look in the dime and drug store as well as the well-known shop—price tags are not the arbiter of good taste.

DRUG AND dime stores have lamp shades, house plants, wastebaskets, inexpensive racks for kitchen towels, inexpensive foam rubber forms which can be covered for pillows and inexpensive throw pillows.

Look in these stores for the small accessories: Wooden figures, ash trays, simple figurines, picture frames, jars, vases, pitchers, trivets, tiles and plaques.

If you move again:

AVOID extra-length couches. Too many rooms lack sufficient wall space or are so small that the couch is out of proportion.

Sectional furniture is versatile and is now available in many different styles. Avoid pieces with arm placement that limits the ways they can be arranged.

IF YOU know you'll be using them only in one home, make draperies of inexpensive materials—muslin or burlap. Or if apartment or house has venetian blinds, you might want to do without draperies.

Use steel shelving which comes in black, grey and green enamel finishes. Use in kitchen for storing appliances, in living-dining area for books, art objects. Store things on shelves in boxes which have been covered with inexpensive, bright-colored material or wall paper.

BUY THE wooden "director's" chairs with canvas seat and back. They can be used in living room, bedroom, recreation room.

Use what you have, such as a footlocker which has been spray-painted for a coffee table or end table; a five-gallon can, spray painted or covered with contact paper for a wastebasket.

Put up travel posters or clip magazine pictures and mat them on colored construction paper to decorate the walls.

Use adjustable shelving, 2-3 small chests of drawers, drop-leaf tables rather than large bookcases, chests and tables which offer less variety in arrangement and might not fit in a new home.

ONE-ROOM APARTMENT has bed, slip-covered brightly for day, against a large storage cabinet. Cabinet has bookshelves and a clothespole and shelf for blankets and sheets behind its curtain.

Just The Right Setting Is Important For Dining

The setting must be right. Faced, as many brides are, with a space in a small apartment called a "dining area," and facing up realistically to a budget, the dream seems about to evaporate. Fortunately, decorators say, neither a dining area nor dining room need be furnished with the conventional matched pieces of furniture called a dining suite.

Individual or unmatched pieces are high style. Select pieces that can serve one purpose now and be used in other places later.

How Young Homemakers Conquer The Time Problem

If a poll were taken of young homemakers, who are also doubling as jobholders or students, biggest stumbling block in the lives is likely to be an acute time shortage.

"I never seem to finish anything," comments a student-wife. "I'm always short a class paper, I can't get around to washing the kitchen windows, and that neat list for the supermarket never gets written down."

SINCE SUCH a busy young wife obviously can't be as well organized as she'd like, traditional methods of housekeeping have to be thrown out the window.

Instead, she must develop the art of getting the most out of whatever scraps of time are available—and being able to let the rest slide without any guilt feelings.

WHILE SHE'S putting on her makeup, she polishes the chrome bathroom fixtures, wipes off the mirror, throws the towels in the laundry bin, and hangs up new ones.

When it comes to big tasks like washing windows and polishing silver, she tackles these piecemeal too. Perhaps only a couple of windows are shined while the gravy's simmering, or only the teapot is polished, or only one cupboard shelf is straightened up, but eventually, in other bits of borrowed time, the job will be completed.

Some Tips On Tipping

In the United States and Canada, the bell boy expects 25 cents per suitcase, even 50 cents in expensive hotels. He also gets 25 cents for delivering ice, a telegram, or when performing any minor errand.

For individual meals, tipping the waiter 15 per cent of the check is the accepted rule. Add more if exceptional service is given or called for and received.

On cruises, tip cabin and dining stewards about $1 per person per day. At the halfway mark, however, give half of the total tip for the voyage to stewards so they can have the money for shore leave.

DELICATE ensemble nevertheless is fashioned for easy care, since it is drip-dry enka nylon tricot. The Aline shortie gown is topped by a colorful robe.

Showers Based On Custom

It's One Of Many Wedding Traditions To Survive

Modern brides reap sizable harvests of "loot" at the traditional bridal shower.

And many have come to feel this is only fair because in their single days they gave to their friends who preceded them down the aisle.

BUT STILL there is a sentimental side to the custom, and most brides enjoy the party atmosphere and being surrounded by their close friends at this great moment in their lives.

One legend which tells how the bridal shower originated concerns a Dutch girl who fell in love with a poor but charitable miller who gave most of his flour to the needy. Because the girl's father did not approve of the miller, he refused to give the girl her dowry, necessary to set up housekeeping, unless she married a wealthy farmer.

TOWNSPEOPLE who had been aided by the young miller joined together and donated small gifts to help the couple. When massed together and "showered" upon the girl, the gifts exceeded the value of the dowry she was supposed to receive.

But the term "shower" was not coined until the 1890s when someone conceived the idea of filling a Japanese paper parasol, then a popular fad in interior decoration, with little gifts. The bride-to-be was obliged to open the parasol over her head, resulting in a "shower" of gifts.

A bride had to have a pretty hard head even back in Roman days. At the wedding feast it was customary to break the wedding cake over her as a sign of abundance. Guests took home small broken pieces of cake, and eventually these "tokens" were invested by the superstitious with the power to make single guests dream of those they would marry, if the tokens were tucked under their pillows on the wedding night.

BRIDES ALSO had rigorous going in the 14th century in Europe.

Wedding guests scrambled to obtain the bride's garter, a symbol of good luck. The disheveled brides finally took to throwing a stocking instead. And with time, custom has made the event less wearing on the brides. They can just toss their bouquets today, and the girl who catches one is supposed to become the next bride.

Orange blossoms, now attached to the bridal veil or carried in her bouquet, were thought by the Saracens to insure happiness and good fortune.

AND THE reason wedding gowns are white is that in early Rome the color signified joy. Later, the connotation of purity was tied in.

Most of the customs connected with marriage have grown up as the rite went through three phases capture, purchase and finally the marriage for love.

For instance, from the days when brides had to be captured, comes the term "best man." He was the most able-bodied of the groom's friends who actually caught the bride as she ran away. Other friends who aided in the chase were called "groomsmen," today's ushers.

From the same phase came the forerunner of the "honeymoon." After the bride was caught, she had to be hidden from kinfolk out to rescue her. After a length of time, usually two weeks, the groom felt confident they had given up looking and gone away, and it was safe for the couple to come out of hiding.

"GIVING THE bride away" harks back to the days when fathers looked upon their daughters as commodities to be sold.

And the bridal veil stems from the same period when the bride's face was covered until after the business contract was secure. Then the bridegroom got the chance to lift the veil and gaze for the first time upon the face of the wife he'd bought.

Practical Presents Really Help

There's a wide range of helpful items available, to fit the giver's budget. Here are some suggestions, to use as a starter:

For $10 or less: Re-chargeable flashlight; vase; knife sharpener; silent butler; thermometer, barometer set; tall salt shaker and pepper grinder in hand rubbed wood; revolving three-tier spice rack; for steaks, a cook and serve aluminum platter, with protecting board underneath; ice bucket; magnetized knife holder with set of kitchen knives, steak knives.

In the $20 or less field, there are: Carving set; electric heating tray—foods keep warm for hours for later comers or unexpected delays; salad bowl with servers; electric blanket; carpet sweeper; combination electric can opener and knife sharpener; transistor radio; aluminum folding cot with foam rubber mattress—for that extra guest.

Choosing Glassware

How to choose basic pieces from all this glitter?

If you can afford it, choose crystal for your special table settings. The added lead content in the glass gives it sheen and weight. To see if it is truly crystal, flick a goblet with a fingernail, and listen to the musical tone.

Your choice of pattern is an individual one, but at the outset, much as you are taken with the blue Sandwich glass goblets or a two-tone etched wine glass in shades of ruby, it might be wise to start simply with clear crystal. Or perhaps a member of the family might like to give you a set of goblets in color.

Basic crystal pieces might be six highball-size tumblers, with weighted bases, which can serve as waterglasses; six sherbet glasses which can double as wine glasses until the proper, smaller wine glasses are available, and six juice glasses.

In caring for crystal, it's wise to suds each glass individually with liquid detergent under the faucet and rinse. Let them dry themselves, upside down on a towel.

Why The Rice?

A Smooth Reception

Along with the major decisions which the bride and her mother must make as to number of guests, elaboratness of menu, and the choice between champagne and punch, there are endless details of arrangement that can prove vexing if they're not anticipated.

IF THE wedding takes place at a time of the year when the guests will need to wear wraps, check room facilities must be made available. Large catering establishments offer these as a matter of course, while clubs usually have two small reception rooms arranged for the guests' comfort.

Arrangements must be made too for transporting the members of the bridal party and the immediate family, which should be charted in advance.

At a large wedding reception, it sometimes happens that the out-of-town great aunt is left out of the swirling, laughing groups, because she knows so few people. A little quiet planning with one of the ushers can help her enjoy the party.

IT'S GOOD too to see that there are chairs available for older guests who may not relish the thought of standing for hours at an informal wedding reception.

Expert planning is also needed to see that guests who must catch a train or plane immediately after the reception have transportation available, and are alerted for departure in ample time.

HONEYMOON HAVEN LIST IS REPORTED

Niagara Falls, once traditional for honeymooners, still is a popular site for tourists—but it has fallen from top place as a haven for honeymooners, a spokesman for the agency said.

Low air fares have something to do with the next most popular places the company listed — Nassau, Jamaica, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

In the list of most popular also are the Pocono Mountains, Sea Island, Ga., Las Vegas, Hawaii and Palma, Majorca.

RADIANT COUPLE have completed the exchange of vows which bind them together for life. It is one of the high points of their lives — one they will remember through the years to come. The scene will be reenacted in Marin County scores of times during the traditional wedding month of June.

Another Busy Year For Cupid

Brides and their nervous partners-to-be may stand up before a richly-dressed church audience for their marriage rites; they may simply find themselves a judge and a couple of witnesses.

But they all have one thing in common—they must obtain a marriage license first.

And the place for that in Marin is County Clerk George H. Gnoss' office. Marriage licenses are a steady item of business for the bustling office.

This year has run almost, but not quite, true to form, Gnoss' deputies say. Two-thirds of the way through May, the county clerk had issued 281 licenses to wed in 1964; the tempo is much like that in 1963.

Figuring a "normal" June volume of 100-plus licenses, together with the remaining days of May, the county expects to see more than 400 marriage licenses issued by July 1.

This is considerably higher than the 352 issued in the same period of 1962, but just about the same as the 411 issued in January-to-June, 1963. And, well below the record 459 issued in the final six months of last year.

A total of 765 couples took out wedding licenses in 1962; the number jumped to 870 last year. Pointing to a busier than normal month in March—75 licenses — deputies in Gnoss' office see indications that wedding bells are going to get at least as much of a workout this year as they did in 1963.

Marin's altar-bound couples are like those everywhere else in the United States. More of them want to make that trip down the aisle in June than in any other month. In 1962, a total of 88 June marriage licenses were issued; last year saw the month's total rise to 102.

Of course, not all the licenses issued are used. Some folks have second thoughts, it seems.

Good Clothing Care Pays Off For The Young Couple

The Brush Can Add Many Years Of Wear To The Garments Of Husband And Wife

Young couples who have to watch closely over the clothes budget would do well to take tender, loving care of their suits and coats to lengthen their years of wearability.

A small investment in real bristle clothes brushes specially designed to pull the tiniest bit of lint out of the wool pile will keep garments looking fresh, and lengthen the time between trips to the cleaner's.

According to Jan Hansum, vice president of a British firm which have had brushmakers to royalty since 1777, natural bristle brushes have a long life span, and at the same time are inexpensively priced.

A popular brush is labeled a cashmere brush, basically intended for cashmere sweaters, but highly useful on any wools or even silks, because its bristles are soft.

A brush with bristles of bahia fibre from Brazil does well on tweeds, because the bristles are sturdy and stiff, but it's equally good on all but the most perishable upholstery.

A hat-and-cloth brush is another all-purpose possession, particularly good for men's clothes and headgear. And a most efficient item in the brush department is a coat-hanger of metal, which folds into a brush, very handy for the hall coat closet.

The Coffee Break Moves Into Homes

The office coffee break has made inroads into home living, and proves to be one of the most casual and inexpensive ways to entertain.

If the young bride is a newcomer in a housing development, or has taken up residence in college quarters for married students, she may want to get acquainted with some of her neighbors without goinng through the elaborate motions of a genuine party.

A KNOCK at the door, or a last-minute telephone call is enough of an invitation. The menu is simplicity itself: a coffee ring, Danish pastry, or fruit muffins, and lots of freshly perked coffee.

INCIDENTLY, if the young bride feels she should not be the first to make the gesture toward friendship, she would do well to forget stringent etiquette rules of the past. If the older woman next-door was a real lifesaver on moving day, say thank-you with a coffee break invitation If you like the looks of the young woman you meet on the elevator, introduce yourself, and invite her to drop in.

You can go on to a closer friendship from there if you wish, or keep it pleasantly casual.

Plants Make Popular Gift

The varied beauty of living plants in their natural red clay containers, or in one of the many interesting planters modern designers are creating in such attractive profusion, makes them increasingly popular "home starter" gifts for June brides.

It's best to have your plant arrive soon after the newlyweds are established in their own household. In selecting your floral bridal gift, this suggestion might help.

Find out a bit about the plant itself. Your florist or garden center people can tell you whether it grew in the shade in its natural habitat and so needs only dir in the new bride's ho whether it grew in the open and prefers a sunny window.

In general, flowering plants like sun; foliage (green) plants prefer shade.

Pearls Traditional

Pearls are linked by tradition to brides by the ancient Hindu belief that the deity Krishna brought a beautiful pearl up from the sea and gave it to his daughter on her wedding day.

Emphasize Dignity In Invitations To The Ceremony

While handwritten notes inviting guests to your wedding are perfectly acceptable if the ceremony is to be small and informal, the traditional formal invitation is still used by most brides-to-be.

This can be engraved or printed in engraving style on a white, ivory or cream-colored double sheet of quality paper, which is folded and inserted in the envelope. Accompanying it is a small, separate reception card.

THE FOLDED invitation and reception card are placed in an envelope which is left unsealed and is addressed simply "Mr. and Mrs. Robinson." This envelope is then slipped into a larger one which is addressed for mailing.

The wording of the invitation is a formal one which has retained its classic dignity through the years and changing times. "The honor of your presence" is still requested with formality, and the invitation to the reception asks for the "pleasure of your company."

IF THE wedding is semi-formal, the bride-to-be may choose a smaller size invitation which is placed in the envelope without folding. The wording, however, is identical.

If the wedding is a simple chapel ceremony with only members of the family present, it's customary to send out announcement cards announcing the marriage and giving date and place of the ceremony. Enclosed "at home" cards state the couple's new address and the date they will be back from their wedding trip.

Which Name Is Correct For Wife?

Is there any girl who hasn't some time before her wedding, tried writing out her new name to see how it looks?

Sally Ann Brown knows she'll soon be Mrs. John Mason.

But for practical purposes she'll sign herself as Sally Brown Mason on nearly all occasions.

This is the name used on her letters, checks and most other places she signs her name.

Mrs. John Mason is used without abbreviation on visiting cards, informal cards and formal invitations. It is also signed on a hotel register, as information.

For the same reason the formal name—Mrs. John Mason—is listed on committees, for charge accounts and mailing.

In business letters she will place (Mrs. John Mason) under her signature of Sally Brown Mason so that the recipient will know how to address a reply.

But in no circumstances does she sign her name on any kind of letter as Mrs. John Mason or Mrs. Sally Ann Brown Mason.

As essential as knowing how to sign the new name is arranging to make the big change on all legal documents and identity cards.

Wedding Gift Givers Deserve Thoughtful Thanks From Bride

Thank-you notes often are written in haste and without the consideration they deserve. The girl who wants to win and influence new friends (her husband's) and forever cement the esteem of her old friends will seriously apply herself to this chore.

Even if a bride-to-be may have to snatch odd moments out of hectic preparations, it is well to send her thank-you notes for shower gifts as soon as possible following the shower. This leaves the decks cleared for prompt notes of appreciation for wedding gifts within about three weeks after the wedding trip.

Simple, undecorated note paper is preferable. Neither a printed thank you or a printed message of thanks on the paper is in the best of taste. This conveys coldness and lack of real appreciation, a rather hurried, something-to-be-gotten-over-with attitude.

Notes of thanks need not be long but should be personal, warm, and sincerely appreciative.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Smith,

John and I are enjoying the salad bowl and servers very much. We have used it almost daily since returning from our trip. I don't know whether you knew but John is an old "salad pro", and your lovely gift makes his tossing especially delightful.

We both want to express our deep appreciation for your thoughtfulness and we expect to use your present to us with great pleasure for many years to ome.

Most sincerely,

Mary N. Bates

Letters of thanks should not be signed "Mary and John Bates". Mary expresses John's appreciation but signs it herself.

The important point is that the thought and effort behind the gift be all made worthwhile by the tenor of the bride's note to the donor, no matter the size or value of the gift.

Tight Squeeze? Here Is How To Open Jars

Glass jars with twist-off tops can be mastered with the opener ordinarily used to spear juice or beer cans. The round end of the opener is inserted under edge of metal top. Pry top gently toward yourself until a swish indicates the release of air. It turns without strain.

SEAMSTRESS STITCHES her own wardrobe. Some young brides who are highly skilled in sewing have even created their own wedding gowns — and the dresses of their attendants. Lucky man who gets this kind of wife.

DECORATOR'S DELIGHT and homemaker's joy are these floral-patterned terry towels, a sure way to brighten any bathroom. And an economical way, as well.

Fit The Luggage To Your Itinerary

What kind of luggage should go with you on your honeymoon?

It depends entirely on your method of travel. Pullman-type bags which permit your dresses to stretch out without folding — ditto, his suits —, are good choices for car or plane travel, but can be an overwhelming nusance on a train trip, where there's little room for luggage storage, or on a ship.

MOST NOVICE travelers tend to buy too-large suitcases and then find them awkward to pack, and unwieldly to handle. Also, if a suitcase is not completely filled, the clothes inside will slide, and pick up wrinkles.

A better choice would be two medium-size overnighters plus a train case, if you're going to a resort that is dressy. If you're planning a more informal car trip, one overnighter should be sufficient, if you're not staying in the same place continually.

The train case is an invaluable piece of luggage even if you're not entraining. In the car, you can keep in it all the items you need for an overnight stop; night clothes, cosmetics, perhaps a sweater, an extra pair of flats, and rolls of spare camera film.

A FLIGHT bag can also serve the same purpose, and if your honeymoon trip calls for sightseeing, choose one you can sling over your shoulder, so your hands are free to handle your camera.

At a resort, the flight bag can go neatly to the beach with suntan lotion and towel inside, and is also handy as a lunch basket if you're bicycling through the country.

Some Help For The Bride In Selecting The Household Linens

While most brides get many household linens as wedding and shower gifts, there are likely to be a few unmet needs.

To fill the gaps watch advertisements for sales. Also special notice might be given to those ads which mention slightly imperfect sheets, pillow cases, blankets, and towels. The flaws are often unnoticeable, usually nothing more serious than a tiny crooked hemline.

AS TO colors in linens, a girl hasn't any choice (unless she has expressed one) when gifts arrive. She can, however, use discretion when she goes on a buying spree of her own.

Things to be considered: It she living in a rented apartment where present colors in towels, for instance, might not suit future domiciles? And then, too, there was the bride of a year who said, "Why did I get those big pink roses? My ideas have changed entirely."

AN OLD rule for number of sheets and pillow cases is still a sound guideline—six sheets per bed. That is, two on the bed, two in the laundry, and two for emergencies. Each bed will require two winter-weight and two summer-weight blankets. A comforter and an automatic blanket are nice extras.

Other bedding needs—two bedspreads, winter and summer; plastic zip-on mattress covers and cotton mattress pads.

Suggested stock for the beginning homemaker: Six or eight plastic or woven mats and a dozen vari-colored napkins; six linen or cotton mats with matching napkins. For the table cloth minded girl, colored cloths with matching napkins.

FOR THE bathroom, an ade- One dozen each, bath towels, hand towels, fingertip towels; 15 to 20 washcloths, about six linen guest towels; three bath mat and lid sets; two small rugs.

Kitchen Pal Of New Bride

The modern food waste disposer makes the conventional disposal of food waste archaic and unnecessary for the young housewife.

Many new and remodeled homes contain the benefits of a convenient and attractive kitchen, including the food waste disposer as a mark of modern kitchen efficiency.

This appliance is a quality product, designed to relieve the homemaker of all the inconvenience associated with the disposing of garbage from the home.

The food waste disposer will shred most kinds of food waste into a fine pulp and flush it quickly down the drain. This includes scrapings, parings, bones, fruit rinds, vegetable tops, pea pods, and corn cobs.

Softer Than Rice

In many places, rice, which can sting and hurt, has been replaced with fresh rose petals which are distributed among the guests as a lovely fragrant shower for the bride and groom.

Make Sure Daughter Learns All The Vital Household Arts

Proper Preparation Now Will Prove Invaluable When She Has Own Home

A common complaint among young housewives is their lack of confidence in planning and furnishing their homes. All too often a girl's training includes little if any preparation for this very important job she assumes.

The Home Furnishings Industry Committee suggests you begin teaching your daughter the household arts at an early age.

YOU COULD have a mother-daughter study course in interior decorating! What fun it would be for both of you, and the chief benefit will be a more relaxed bride someday. Certainly the more confident a bride is, the better her chances for happiness.

The best teaching tool is her own room. After she reaches the teen-age years, allow her to "do" her room. Tell her the total amount of money that can be spent, and remind her it must cover drapery, rugs and accessories, etc.

WHEN SHE is ready, let her help you with decisions about decorating and purchasing for the rest of the house. By shopping with you she learns how to look for value, how to compare, and brand names to depend upon.

In essence she will learn the ABCs of planning and buying for a home.

Instead of confining her household maintenance chores to the dishes and dusting, show her how you care for draperies and carpets, how you remove spots and stains. Through the years she will accumulate valuable knowledge about the care of furniture.

YOU MIGHT suggest she start clipping and filing ideas for decorating. Furnishings could easily become a hobby for her.

Through your guidance your daughter will take pride in her home during her early years of marriage instead of apologizing for her lack of knowledge.

REFINISHING A ladderback chair takes time and patience. But by such economies, the bride can go a long way toward solving the problem of furnishing the new home or apartment on a limited budget. It releases money for other needed furniture pieces.

Inventive Housewife Makes Own Gadgets

Although hardware and department stores are loaded with all kinds of marvelous gadgets for better home organization, it's possible for the inventive young woman to create a number of do-it-yourself conveniences herself and from practically nothing.

To store paperbags, take a wire coat hanger, bend it way down from the hook, then turn it up about halfway from the bottom. The folded bags can slip neatly over, and then be hung out of sight in a closet.

TO MAKE refrigerator cleaning easier, spread plastic food wrap on the bottom of fruit and vegetable drawers. Then you can fold up and toss away debris, without having to scour the bins.

Use plastic wraps too to cover mixing bowls and mixers, for storing bread and rolls to keep them fresh, and to house lettuce. Be sure, however, to store the lettuce unwashed, otherwise it wilts.

Save olive and jelly jars complete with tops for storing leftovers. Thoughtful manufacturers now put liquid measurements on some jars, so they can also be used for making cream sauce and salad dressings.

NEED A clothes sprinkler in a hurry? Punch six small holes in the top of a covered jar, and you're all set.

Wallpaper makes an excellent valance for a kitchen window when you don't want to shut out the light by using curtains. Or make a cloth valance out of a remnant.

Turkish towels, in addition to serving their original purpose, can be whipped into bathroom curtains or dressing table skirt.

Clutter Can Be Hidden— Even In Close Quarters

In a young couple's usually cramped living quarters, the problem of storing two sets of possessions plus assorted household goods is often insurmountable.

Studio apartment dwellers have no access to attics, and rarely to cellars, since the old-time cellar has probably been converted into still more studio apartments.

Along with the hideaway bed is the hideaway chest, offering seating space when needed, and storage space for all kinds of possessions inside.

Wicker baskets accustomed in the summer to go on picnics can stay bravely out in the open and become hiding places for letters, clippings, even books, if the shelves are overflowing.

Wastebaskets can be pressed into service for hiding places, if real desperation sets in. And inexpensive paper transfer files, made attractive by wallpaper coverings, can act as gadget collectors.

Bride's Decision

It's up to the bride to decide whether the wedding punch will be alcoholic or non-alcoholic.

. . . a diamond bridal duo she will cherish forever . . . outstanding for beauty, for quality and for value. Our diamond specialists will be glad to help you make the wisest choice!
